Seaplane Lands at Mondego River; Cannot Make Port During the Day

Washington, May 30.—Starting for Plymouth, England, this morning at 5:20 under favorable flying conditions, the NC-4...

"The message received at Brest and relayed to the Navy Department said: 'NC-4 at Mondego river; must await high tide. Seaplane cannot make Plymouth. Request destroyed to land seaplane within 300 miles.'"

An intercepted wireless message by the steamship George Washington from the destroyer Rathburne to another vessel said: "Have not sighted NC-4. Am searching southward of station B."

The message from Commander Read, however, indicated that the plane was out of commission so far as continuing to Plymouth during the day was concerned.

Nothing further has been heard by the naval authorities at Paris or Brest from the NC-4 since she communicated with station B at 9:20 o'clock. An intercepted wireless from the steamer George Washington from the destroyer Rathburne...

A message received here relayed from the destroyer Woolsey at station C on the route of the NC-4, is interpreted by the naval authorities here as meaning that the seaplane landing or was left so by a receding tide while repairs were being made.

Washington, May 30.—The Navy Department was officially advised of the departure of the seaplane NC-4 from Lisbon for Plymouth at 5 o'clock this morning in a brief message from Admiral Cummings at Lisbon.

The seaplane NC-4, sole survivor of three giant machines which left Rockaway Point, N. Y., on May 8 on the epochal air voyage across the Atlantic, reached Lisbon at 8:02 o'clock, Greenwich time, on the evening of Tuesday, May 27.

Nothing further has been heard by the naval authorities at Paris or Brest from the NC-4 since she communicated with station B at 9:20 o'clock.

When the NC-4 reached Lisbon she had travelled since leaving Rockaway Point a distance of 3,150 sea miles, having been in the air 43 hours and 33 minutes.

TRIBUTE PAID TO ANCIENT BLUE AND THE NEWER KHAKI

Mothers Breathe a Prayer For Heroic Dead Resting Under Foreign Soils; Grand Army Passes in Review

SALUTES FIRED OVER THE FRESHLY DECORATED GRAVES

Memory of the nation's heroic dead was kept green to-day when millions paused to pay tribute to the thousands who gave their lives for liberty while wearing the ancient blue and the modern khaki.

Harrisburg placed its tribute of kinship and love in the cemeteries and burying grounds within the municipality and its environs.

Scores for Harrisburg mothers given over entirely to the thousands of young men who answered the last call of the Nation.

The events in themselves this year are much the same as usual. The parade, as in the past, had the G. A. R. men as the central figures and the customary decoration of the graves of the departed veterans and the exercises in the cemetery were arranged in the same routine.

While the arrangements for the events and the events themselves were as customary, yet there was a difference in the whole ceremony imparted by some of the participants, the khaki-clad men who served with those other men who died here, until the service must be
