GRANTS WORKERS RIGHT TO HOLD INDOOR SESSIONS

Mayor of McKeesport Restricts Speakers to English Language

By Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 23.—The American Federation of Labor will be permitted to hold meetings in halls in McKeesport in its effort to organize iron and steel workers of this section, Mayor George F. Lysle has informed representatives of the labor body. While the Federation committee was in session with the Mayor, a meeting, under direction of the American Federation of Labor organizers, was in progress on a street corner in McKeesport.

The question of holding indoor meetings in McKeesport has been before the public for several months, labor leaders charging that city officials were threatening them with arrest if they attempted to hold organization sessions. William Z. Foster, secretary of the Federation's national committee, heralded the Mayor's decision as a victory for the American Federation of Labor's fight to "re-establish the right of free speech and free assembly" in McKeesport and other industrial towns of Western Pennsylvania.

He said that Mayor Lysle had placed certain restrictions upon his concession which the committee will consider before deciding whether to accept or reject the offer. The local committee in charge of the organizing campaign, will meet Tuesday to act on the proposition.

According to the Federation committee, Mayor Lysle stipulated that meetings in halls could be held only when speeches in a foreign tongue were eliminated and providing that Secretary Foster would not address such sessions. The labor committee termed the Mayor's restrictions as "ridiculous."

GROCER IS HELD ON ARSON CHARGE

Morris Kramer Is Arrested by State Officers Following Fire in His Store

Morris Kramer, green grocer, was arrested shortly after twelve o'clock Saturday night, and is now in jail awaiting trial charged with setting fire to his store, located in the ground floor of Park's apartments. The house contains sixteen apartments, most of them are occupied.

The fire was discovered Saturday evening at exactly 11.30, by a newsboy and by Ben McNear, a grocer on the opposite side of the street. When first seen the fire was insignificant, but in a moment it assumed alarming proportions. The Citizen fire company had no difficulty in extinguishing the flames before any damage had been done. The fire gave the occupants of the apartments a real scare, and some of them appeared in the hallways in their night clothes, but they were assured that there was no danger.

when the flames were extinguished an attempt was made to discover the origin of the fire. The fire started in an egg crate over which had been placed another egg crate, the whole covered with an old coat.

The crates stood immediately back of a large slanting fruit board which completely hid the crates from the view of the people passing by. Kramer was seen in the store less than half an hour before the flames were discovered.

The circumstances that led to Kramer's arrest are many, and while no direct evidence seems to be held against him, Fire Chief Malehorn is confident arson can be proved. Kramer opened the store several months ago, and has been in more of less difficulty ever since. He was arrested on several occasions for keeping chickens in his store and as keeping a nuisance when he allowed vegetables to decay in his cellar, the fumes of which permeated the apartments above. The arrests were followed by alleged financial difficulties, and on Saturday he sold nearly all of his stock at prices way below the wholesale value. At the time of the fire his stock of goods was insignificant in value. A few days before he is said to have boasted of having $1,500 insurance on his stock and fixtures. The fixtures consisted chiefly of an old counter, a new cash register and a new refrigerator, the refrigerator and register still unpaid.

Immediately after the flames had been extinguished Kramer was sought by the police and citizens as well. Fortunately the police found him first. Had the citizens congregated about the store discovered him, he would have been roughly handled. Talk of lynching was freley indulged in by many.

Kramer was discovered by Chief Longenaker at the home of his uncle, Isaac Gittlin, 571 South Fourth street. Information was made against him by Fire Chief Malehorn, but the case was to-day taken up by Officers Sersch and Finley of the State Fire Marshal's office. He was placed in jail for a preliminary hearing before Justice Stees. The morning he was placed under $1,500 bail, which he secured.

WOMAN'S HAND MAKES IT "JUST LIKE HOME"

of Bellefonte, Pa., and Miss Watts, of Harrisburg, who had served as "Y" Secretaries in France and Germany, had come home with the Rainbows, and why not set them up in an unprovised "house" partitioned off from the main lobby, give them a free hand in furnishing it—and see what would happen!

What happened can best be realized by the person who drops in any evening between 5 and 9 P. M. There are other times, too, but those are the rush hours. Lonesome lads in khaki and shy gobs in blue edge up toward the open door in twos and threes, hardly believing their eyes, then sidle in, and the first thing you know, some one has tackled the piano, and the rest is easy. It's HOME, that's all.

"Seems like some of these boys didn't realize," says Miss Laurie, "how much they needed mothering and big-sisterin gtill they came in here. Sometimes they just come in and sit in a corner and look. Others make for the writing materials and start letters to the folks back home. Again they will be hungry for talk and will crowd around, chatting and remiscing till we feel as happy and popular as debutantes in a hall room. It is a perfect joy to see how they respond to our friendliness."

Miss Watts broke in to explain that there is only one thing barred, and that is formality.

"We are going to make this corner as near like home as it's possible to do. No fuss, no company manners, no effort to entertain. Just a case of doing whatever you like, however you like it. We are going to sew and mend and darn. Or sing a song. Or play jazz. Or classics. Or take a hand at checkers. Or listen to somebody's story if he wants to tell it to us. We'll even advise, if he asks us to, just as his sister or his mother would do if they could.

"Whether the fellows are returned soldiers and sailors, or whether they are just boys who are away from home making their way in the big city, we want to be their big sisters, or their 'mothers' if they'll let us. They liked it all in France, and we think they'll like it here."

Miss Laurie and Miss Watts are rather too youthful to suggest the role of mother to the sprawling big chaps who make such good use of the "Y's" new home corner. Yet they have had birthdays enough to make them understand when Bill or Peter confides about that girl whose picture has been toted around in an inner pocket since goodness knows when. And to offer sensible suggestions in the case of that quarrel. Or the letter that didn't seem to mean exactly what it said. Or any of those other things that a fellow gets perplexed about once in a while.

Both young women were selected for service abroad because they were peculiarly fitted by personality and temperament to be the useful all-around pals and helpers they have been for more than eighteen months. First they were located at Is-sur-Tille with the Service of Supplies. Then they were at Bar-le-Duc, where the jelly comes from, and finally were sent to Rolandseck-on-the-Rhine, with the Army of Occupation, being assigned to the 166th Infantry, a part of the 42d, or Rainbow, Division.

There were a good many times when those fellows over there "needed a friend," and not one time when Miss Laurie or Miss Watts failed them. The boys paid them the cherished compliment too of calling them affectionately "Mother," notwithstanding their lack of gray hairs and comfortable double chins.

"Ain't it funny," as one buck private put it, "how they've got the knack of being your ma one minute and your sister the next? Women," he concluded, with a sageness beyond his twenty-two years, "do make things better somehow, whether it is war time or peace time, or over there or over here. I used to think girls wasin the way when there was anything big doin'. But I'll be goshhanged if they don't give you a helpin' hand in most everything nowadays!"

In this opinion the hitherto womanless "Y" on West 57th Street heartily joins. They mean to make this new form of home service for women permanent, on the principle that even after the soldiers are all back in civil life again the young men their organization serves are soldiers of a sort, and away from home, and mere men with the masculine point of view, and will be better off for having a woman about the place.
