"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LISLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problems of a Girl Wife

CHAPTER CXXXIX
(Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Ever since that noon when I sat with Neal and Pat and Carlotta at the Olmsvage and heard of the birth of the Dalton-Sturges Corporation, I've known that some day I would have to tell Jim about it.

"How long have you known this?" Jim demanded, in a low, even voice.

"Ever since it happened. Two weeks ago, I guess."

"And why—knowing my previous interest in Neal, apart from the fact that he is my wife's brother—haven't you seen fit to tell me?"

"I didn't think the time had come, Jim. I thought it best to wait," I murmured almost sheepishly, as the situation began to slip away from me.

You didn't think the time had come? repeated Jim still with his remote air of being my judge rather than my husband. Then his voice changed, deepened and rang out accusingly:

"When we met Pat and Carlotta that night in my office building and I felt that their being together was an insult to Jeanie, you knew?"

Neal was with them then?"

"Yes, Jim," I said frantically. "Stop cross-questioning me and let me explain."

"I shall be glad to have you explain," said Jim, in a broken voice.

"I couldn't say anything that night. I was so intent on having you save Phoebe from Dick West that I didn't want to complicate matters. I know you hate Pat—because of Virginia. But I think he still loves her; I want to bring them together. I long to."

"Will you please stick to the matter we're considering," said Jim, a little wearily. "I'm not in sympathy with your trying to play Providence to Virginia, when Pat shows his preference for a woman of—Carlotta Sturges's type."

"All right," I retorted, getting a little sulen at his indifference to all my best intentions. "I didn't say anything about Neal then because I wanted you to save Phoebe from Dick West—and for Neal, and I thought—"

"You thought," interrupted Jim, furiously, "that you could run things me included—to suit your self? You thought you'd let me have as much of the truth as I was capable of understanding? As a toss-up between my judgment and yours you always prefer your own, Anne. Keeping the truth from me is deceiving me—making a fool of me. I'll not stand for it. Don't you know I won't stand for it?"

"What are you going to do?" I cried, after the words were out I realized they sounded like a challenge, though I hadn't meant to dare Jim.

"What am I going to do?" he repeated, and I saw how tense his body had become. "I don't know, Anne, I don't know. But things have come to a sad pass between man and wife when the woman has no faith in the man's judgment where his nearest and dearest are concerned."

"It isn't that," I interrupted, eagerly. "It's only that I think you don't understand."

Jim turned on me with something like a snarl. His hands tightened on the chair back. Then he flung it aside and took one swift step forward, to halt abruptly and fling up his hand to his head.

"What was I going to do?" he muttered, half to himself. Then he dropped his hands to his side and stood with them clenched so the knuckles showed white.

"Arne, I don't trust myself," he said in a low, shaken voice. "I've got to get away and think things over. I'm wild to-night—mad. I roof. I'll clear out and go down to the Aviators' Club for a day or two. Perhaps there I can get some perspective on the tangle we're in—you and your brother, and I and my sisters. It's a terrible mess. I'd like to try to work us all clear of it."

"Jim, if you'll only let me show you," I began. But Jim interrupted. "That's why I'm going, Anne. So you can't insist on showing me. So I can see things through my own eyes. The minute you need me, send for me and I'll come back. But somehow I can't think of any one so self-sufficient as you needing me."

Jim swung away and limped from the room. I sat in silence for a moment. Then I cried:

"Jim—I need you now. I'm not self-sufficient. Come back!" But there was no answer.

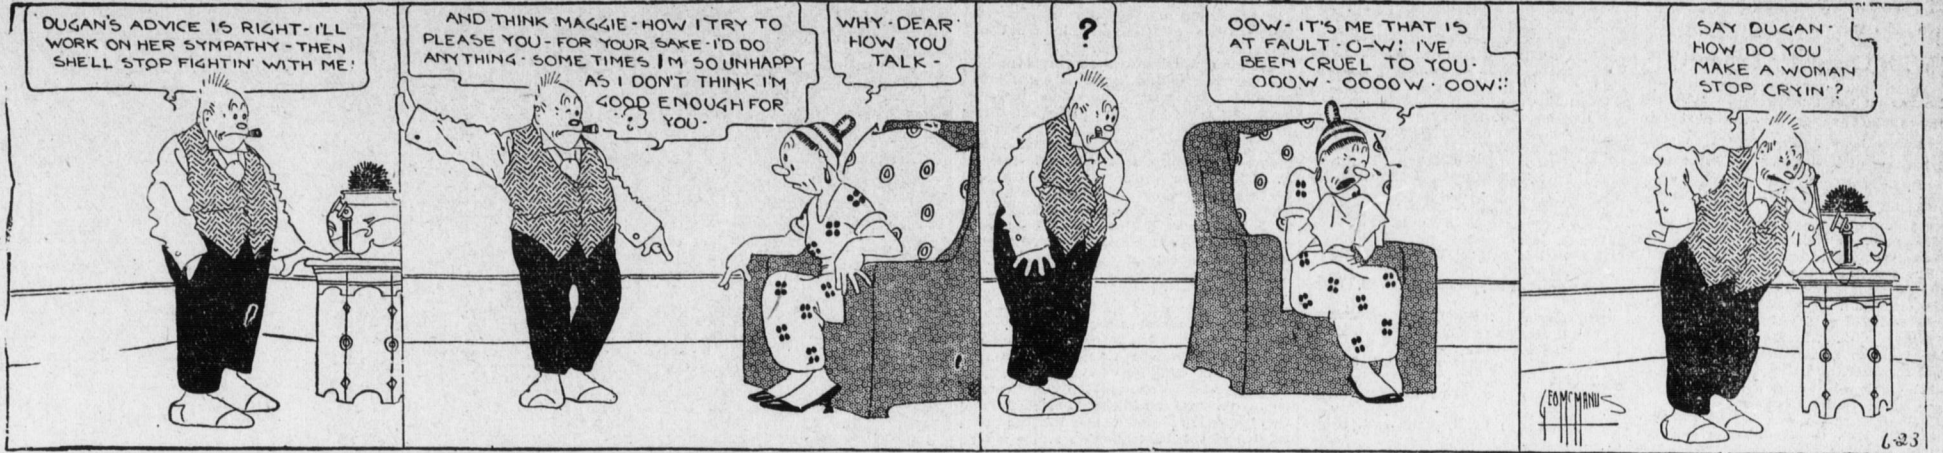

He was gone.

To Be Continued.

Republican Leaders Plan Cutting of Expenditures

Washington, June 23.—House and Senate leaders are determined to do all possible to hold the appropriations which must be hurried through in the next several weeks down to the lowest practicable figures.

While greater reductions could be made were it possible to devote two or three months to the bills, it is certain that the cuts in expenditures will be large.

The army appropriation bill, reported recently from the House military committee, has been reduced by about $400,000.

The navy bill will be reduced below the figure at which it was reported in the last Congress.

Other important reductions are to be made.

Dauphin Will GET $12,968.42 Allowance From State For Aid For Township Highways

According to calculations by State Highway Department officials, Dauphin county will get $12,968.42, Cumberland $16,094.85 and Perry $9,765.89, as shares of the State distribution of $1,142,049.38 for improvement of township "dirt" roads. This will be for 1913 and 1914 and is intended to cover an annual reimbursement from the State of fifty per cent. of the total amount of road tax collected by the township as shown in the sworn statement, but it is provided, however, that no township shall receive in any one case more than $20 per mile of township road in said township.

By Act of June 3, 1915, the provisions of the Act of July 22, 1915, were suspended until all deficiencies incurred prior to the year 1915 be paid by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. During the present session of Legislature, an appropriation of $1,142,049.38 was made to pay in full all the deficiencies due the townships and the certification of this bonus to the State Treasurer for payment to the townships is now under way. The method provided for making this distribution is for the State Highway Commissioner to certify to the Auditor General the amount due the respective township. The Auditor General then upon approval is required to draw warrant upon the State Treasurer for payment and the State Treasurer to pay direct to the Treasurer of the board of township supervisors. Vouchers are now being prepared and will soon be certified to the Auditor General covering the distribution in full of the deficiency appropriation which becomes available on June 1, 1919.

Australian Copper Mines Closed Because Demand Has Decreased

London, June 23.—All but two of the Australian copper mines and smelters are reported to have been closed down because of the large stocks of metal on hand and the very small demand.

The American Chamber of Commerce in London reports that this condition has raised the question in interested circles in Great Britain as to whether copper should be imported from the United States to the detriment of the industry in British Dominions.

Sixty per cent of the British imports of copper last year came from the United States and only a little over nine per cent from Australia.

War allocation of shipping space had a lot to do with this but there is a feeling in England, that imports from the United States should now be kept down and preference given to the Australian product. This would be a further means of reducing Great Britain's adverse balance of trade with the United States.

New Devices For Airplanes Are Under Experiment

Washington, June 23.—Indestructible gasoline tanks, automatic cranks and other gadgets are a few of the airplane equipment devices which the Army air service's engineering section is seeking to perfect. American inventors have been asked to assist.

The gasoline tank desired would withstand "a salvo of fifteen shots fired at a range of thirty yards, the bursting action of incendiary tracer, incendiary and armor-piercing bullets, without fire resulting."

A maximum weight limit of seven-five per cent. more than the ordinary tank has been fixed.

An automatic crank, mounted on a truck and electrically driven, is under experiment. Portable hangars of canvas of the type now used, are very unsatisfactory, according to aviation officials.

Endorses Plan For Memorial to Men Who Built Big Canal

Ancon, Canal Zone, June 23.—A memorial to the engineers who built the Panama Canal, to be erected in the form of a building containing assembly and library and museum facilities, was endorsed at a meeting of the Panama section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. It is intended to enlist the co-operation of the national engineering societies. It is believed that a site overlooking the canal will be granted by the United States government.
