A Policy That Spells Permanence There is just one way to achieve a permanent success in a retail business and that is to build a loyal, enthusiastic clientele. And the only way to create this stable clientele is to give satisfaction in the way of good values plus skilled and willing service. It is because I realize this fact to the fullest that I have instructed my salespeople never to try to force a sale—never to seek to convince a customer against her will that a certain item is suitable for her purpose. Look over my display—try on what appeals to you—buy only if you feel thoroughly satisfied. There is no obligation involved in looking. If you don't see what you want walk out and the salesperson will say "Good bye" with a smile. One sale forced means a customer lost for life. A dozen sales lost with good grace because the goods were not exactly adapted to the customer's needs mean a customer who will call again some day and make a purchase. Mary Sachs North Third Street at No. 210 This store will be closed all day Friday, July 4th, and Saturday, July 5th. Open all day Thursday.
