THE OLDNESS OF NEWEST SOCIALISM

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

the world is agog over the new mood of Socialism that is expressing itself in violent forms in certain centers which hold public attention. Mil-ilons of people sincerely believe that this whole basic idea of a recon-structed social order is entirely new. They assume that Socialism—if so indefinite word be permissible—is a discovery of recent years. Yet here we come upon a picture of the first company of Christian be-lievers, bent upon realizing complete communism—selling their individual possesions and having all things in a mood of high spiritual exaltation. We might almost say that the Chris-tian church began as an experimen-in Socialism. To-day the church is the world's best bulwark against the extreme Socialism, such as Bolshevism, which is being preached by radicals in Russia and everywhere. How are these two positions to be reconciled? Has the church fails to be in the forefront of her gleam, and is communion right? her gleam, and is communion right?

part that those eminent Christian laymen—known as such before ever they came to political position— President Wilson, Lloyd George and Arthur Balfour, are playing in the reconstruction of the world. They are only typical of an uncounted company of men and women serv-ants of our time who could say, in their innermost hearts, "Thy love of Christ constraineth us." Inventors, merchants, scientists, writers, pub-licists, educators, all would acknowl-edge that force in their public serv-ice. Turning aside from the emi-nent and distinguished, we have only to remember that the public school teachers of the land are splendidly Christian in their motive and in their influence. It would DR. Riding on those tides are sinister pirate craft. Nevertheless the move-ment is good and of God. overstressed the social and economic side of their discipleship, or else ex-side of their discipleship, or else expressed it in a mistaken form, or the Christian Church as a whole has been guilty of a profound error and apostasy. Let us see.
Forms are incidental and transi-

Forms are incidental and transi-tory: the spirit is essential and abiding. Jesus himself laid down that principle. The world needed a scheme of communism less than it needed a new disposition of genuine brotherhood. Christ did not come to establish any special form of so-cial order communism or aristoccial order, communism or aristoc racy, any more than he came to set up a distinctive form of government up a distinctive form of government, as the republican or the monarchial. Instead, he put into the hearts of his people a new fire of divine love for their kind. His followers have always been known for their good will toward men. They do good to all men, and especially to such as are of the household of the faith. Tesus creates saints: and saints me Jesus creates saints: and saints ro

Because becoming a Christian is Because becoming a Christian is an individual, rather than a mass matter, and because the world ever has greater need of a vitalized per-sonalities than of new institutions, the stamp of Scriptural approval is not given to that first impulsive ef-fort at Communism, other than to record the fact. The church is a living organism, and not a static construction. Her members have living organism, and not a static construction. Her members have shaped and reshaped the world, and are still doing so. Nevertheless, the Christian interest is primarily in the individual man or woman. Institutions only incidentally mould people; people shape institu-tions. We find that into the early church, even during the first blush of its experiment in communism. of its experiment in communism there crept into the fellowship those there crept into the fellowship those, like Ananias and Sapphira, who really did not belong within the church. They prefigured the doom of any society which could be em-ployed for purposes of self exploita-tion by designing persons. In Rus-sia, it is the designing self-seekers, the crafty politicians after power and privilege and wealth, who have
