Which is Cheaper-- To Buy or to Make? Not long ago a friend of mine fell into conversation with a manufacturer of dress forms. "How is business?" inquired my acquaintance. "Very poor," was the reply. "It has been steadily dwindling for the past ten years. The reason is that pretty apparel is sold so cheaply nowadays that women find it a better investment to buy than to make." Most women have awakened to this fact. The manufacturer of women's apparel possesses several advantages over the woman who buys her material and makes her own clothes. He buys in larger quantities hence at a much lower price. He manufactures in quantity utilizing power machinery hence saves time. Doesn't it stand to reason that he can deliver a more satisfactory garment at a lower price? Fifty years ago all women had their shoes custom made. Today they buy ready-made footwear. They secure a better article at a lower price. The same applies to apparel. But not all women have yet realized it. If your own time is worth anything to you, it's a poor investment to make rather than to buy. Whether or not you buy here—buy anyway. It's the modern—the better—way. Visiting the Shops With Adele

In the early part of the last century a complete set of beautiful girandole graced the mantel of a certain front street mansion. There, from their point of vantage, they looked down on many a gorgeous scene and stately gathering. Today the same unbroken set stands in Saltzgriver's, 223 North Second street, waiting to be purchased by some appreciative admirer of the antique. An air of romance and of by-gone days hovers around it. And, as one gazes at the brass standards cast in the shape of Romeo and Juliet, the marble bases and the sparkling prisms, one cannot help but feel the force of the statement that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever."

“STERLING” ELECTRIC WASHING MACHINE & REVERSIBLE, SWINGING WRINGER

Have you seen the Doughtich winery? You simply can't afford to miss them. A display of silk shirts, most unusual in character, is there for you to witness. Ten thousand dollars worth are being displayed daily in one window alone, all marvels of style and quality, each bearing a genuine reduction. This event, to continue for two weeks, affords a rare opportunity for men in every walk of life to procure silk shirts of the highest grade at a nominal figure. No one has been forgotten. There are shirts of every description and sort—shirts for the working man, shirts for the professional man, shirts for every man. Don't let another day elapse without joining the great throng of eager shoppers who are visiting the Doughtich store.
