"When a Girl Marries"

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problems of a Girl Wife

CHAPTER CCXLIII.

(Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Mrs. Harrison?" asked a reedy little voice over the telephone. "This is Mrs. Carrington Mason—Evelyn's mother. I was so sorry to miss you both times you called. And Mr. Mason and I meant to run over to see you. And I did so want to have you in to dine. But I suppose all that's out of the question now"—

Wonderful Dress Sale For Friday and Saturday Only

This is the sale many have been waiting for as it includes all our high class stock of Georgette Dresses in flesh and white. Many of the women of Harrisburg know that this little shop carried as large and extensive a line of this class of dresses as a shop in the city. Our business has been very large on these dresses, so naturally we had to carry a large stock, so Friday and Saturday you have the choice of a won-derful assortment of beautiful dresses at a great saving.

Dresses That Were $25.00, $30.00 and Up to $35.00

at $19.75

These Dresses are all the newest styles and desirable shades—Flesh, White, Peach, Sunset and Maize—the sizes are 14 to 42 and at least 25 styles to select from both beaded and plain effects are included. You really must see these Dresses to appreciate them. We would advise early selection, as although we have plenty of Dresses to start we feel sure that the response will be large and the first will be the most fortunate ones.

20 Dresses at $15.00

Regular Prices Up to $25.00

These Dresses need no extensive description as all we need to say is that they are dresses from our regular stock and sold regularly at the above prices, which means that they are worth even more at other stores, as our original prices are always much under most shops, due to our low expense, so you can come here and get a real high class dress at the price you will pay most places for inferior garments. These dresses are georgette, crepe de chine and of memories of the days that were gone.

All Our Better Cotton Dresses at $9.95

Strange Fancies

Now Desiree Leighton owned it. Aunt Jeanne had undoubtedly left it to the girl in her will.

Slipping the trinket into his pocket David De Laine walked slowly around to his rooms, stopping on the way for a bite of luncheon.

Alone in his quarters, he seated himself and forthwith brought out the pendant again.

It looked strangely out of place in his meanly-furnished room in a cheap lodging house on Lexington as a seer gazes into a crystal ball. As he looked strange fancies came to his mind. He remembered how much his aunt had loved him how fond she had been of Desiree — how she had hoped to bring about an engagement between the pair.

If she had succeeded, he mused she might have given Desiree this pendant as an engagement present. Or, since much that she owned would have belonged eventually to him, he might have been the possessor of this jewel.

might have been the possessor of this jewel.

Then, of course, he would have given it to his betrothed. He fancied how he would have shown it to her, and clasped the chain about her fair young throat, watching the light that would come to her eyes as he told her that as a child he had thought this pendart beautiful, but that now it looked more beautiful than it ever looked before, because it was where it really belonged. And she would look up to him and smile—

He sprang to his feet with a smothered exclamation of self-disgust. What a fool he was! He looked about him as one awakening from a dream.

man toward a girl he admires.

Undoubtedly there still lingered somewhere in the depths of David De Laine's mind some memory of the hard feeling he had recently entertained for Desiree Leighton. Yet because of a kindly word and an implied apology he had driven from his present consciousness the resentment that had lodged there an hour or two ago.

When he left Miss Leighton at her soon he smiled brightly as she remarked that, after all, the runabout was a rather nice little car.

"And I suppose," Desiree added, "that it is much less of an extravagance than the large car is. It burns less gasoline, doesn't it?"

"Yes," David replied, "much less. So one can have a comfortable feel-so the series of the solution in Paralise!

There was a great world war on; he could not even fight in it, ewas a common chauffer;; the girl of whom he had been dreaming was the daughter of his employer.

She was as far removed from him by the position in this world as Aunt Jeanne now was by her position in Paradise!

A sense of oppression overwhelmed him. Yes, he had been a fool, He forced himself to remember that only was a rather nice little car.

BENEFITS MANKIND

Two discoveries have added greatly to human welfare.
In 1835 Newton originated the vacuum process for condensing milk with cane sugar to a semi-liquid form. In 1883 Horlick at Racine, Wis., discovered how to reduce milk to a dry powder form with extract of malted grains, without cane sugar. This product HORLICK named Malted Milk. (Name since copied by others.) Its nutritive value, digestibility and ease of preparation (by simply stirring in water) and the fact that it keeps in any climate,
