Miss Golden Puts the Touch of Genius into My Hats

As a rule professional and artistic talent gravitate to the great centers, Paris, London or New York. But there are exceptions. The Mayo Brothers, world-famed surgeons, remain in a little Minnesota town and the world makes a beaten path to their retreat. Elbert Hubbard settled down in East Aurora, New York and the Fra's disciples gathered from all corners of the globe. Emerson lived in the little town of Concord, Mass., and made it a world center of philosophic thought.

Exceptional ability whether it be applied to medicine, literature, philosophy or the making of rat traps inevitably makes itself felt and reaps its reward.

Some have wondered how I ever secured the services of Miss Golden with her undeniable genius for millinery design and why she remains n Harrisburg. Why is she not on Fifth Avenue? But her friends are here; her talent is recognized; she is overwhelmed with business. The fame of her creations is gradually extending far beyond the confines of this city

If you have not yet tested her skill, call and inspect some examples of her handiwork. Or you may find yourself in the position of the Camden man who when asked for Walt Whitman's address, by a visitor who had come from overseas, confessed he had never heard of his distinguished
