Concern in Markets
In the markets there is much concern about what action Council will take with other regular dealers in that they will ask for complete explanations of just how the ordinance might affect them.

One man who sells weekly to another dealer about 12 pounds of butter which the second one then disposes of to regular customers asked whether the ordinance would be affected by the clause which prohibits reselling. Other cases like this may develop, it was predicted, but customers declared that they know practically all the dealers in the markets who have such arrangements in order to supply regular trade with certain commodities which they ordinarily do not have. They said that the forestalling ordinance will stop buyers from going through the markets before the usual crowds of customers arrive, who meet farmers and truckers outside the markets, and buy up produce, then resell it at greatly advanced prices. A lengthy discussion of the ordinance is expected at the Council session next Tuesday, all of the commissioners showing much interest in the measure when it was read for the first time this week.

HUCKSTERS OPPOSE FORESTALLING LAW

sure that it would bring results provided it was properly enforced. Some of them intimated that if the police do not see that forestalling and price fixing stops, they will organize committees to watch buyers in the markets, and when they find evidences of violations of the law they will prosecute the offenders before city officials.

DREADNAUGHTS ARE IN CANAL

oiled at Colon this afternoon she swung lazily into Limon bay whence she took the two ships part of the way to the dam, creeping slowly through the first cuttings of the waterway amid dense jungle growth like some weird amphibian in a prehistoric swamp. Nearing the locks, the crew flung landing lines overboard, which quickly drew inboard steel cables that led to the electric "mules" running on tracks on each side of the locks. The whole operation seemed to function automatically, for not an order was heard as the dreadnaughts slid into the lower locks as easy as a shuffle into a sewing machine. Rapidly as Row Boat
The steel gates astern the flagship then closed the great jaws and churning water rose up from viaducts in the bottom of the lock, while the New Mexico was lifted up and rapidly as a row boat. The flagship was then lifted out of the next two locks in the same fashion while crowds standing on top of the concrete lock walls threw bananas and coconuts at the ship's crew. Twenty destroyers went through the canal Thursday, passing through the locks in groups of ten. Captain Twining, chief of staff, declared the canal had proved its naval value beyond a doubt, as dreadnaughts may be easily moved from the Atlantic to the Pacific with celerity and without trouble as shown by to-day's operation. The Pacific fleet will leave Panama for San Diego, Cal., Sunday night.
