I F I were crotch grain mahogany I would ask for nothing more of life than to be made into an antique bureau such as the one I saw recently at Saltzsiver's Art and Antique Store, 223 North Second street. Made in Empire style, with scroll frort and fascinating glass knobs, it is the exact replica of the original. And one glimpse is sufficient to convince even the most skeptical that the aforementioned original must have been a perfect model of simplicity and symmetry. As is ever the case with antique furniture, it possesses an air of elegance and dignity all its own. Nothing would so add to the atmosphere of a room as the acquisition of just such a bureau. HAT are little girls made of?" "Why sugar and spice and everything nice"—and since that is the case, don't you think we should treat them accordingly, boys? Of course we should. Remember that, and the next time you take your best girl to the movies or a dance be sure to make the evening complete by drifting into Weaver's, 29 North Second street, and treating her to a delicious sundae or cool, refreshing drink. In other words, live up to the old saying, "Sweets for the sweet." It surely does pay. That is why we suggest acquiring the Weaver habit. For it is there that expert dispensers mix sparkling, thirst-quenching drinks and make those tempting, nothing-could-taste-better sundaes.

HIPPITY - HOP, hippity-hop, goes the little rabbit, and flippity-flop, flippity-flop goes the little fish—or rather, that is what they would do if they had half a chance. Just at present, however, they calmly wait in the window of the Marianne Toy Shop, Locust street, for the time when someone will present them to a happy, little boy or girl for a birth-day gift. And waiting with them are many other interesting toys. Right next to the fuzzy, wuzzy rabble set you over did see, while near-by a miniature comb and brush of palest blue white away the hours in self-admiration. Dear me, I wish I weren't too ancient to play with them myself.

PREACHING IN BROOKLYN
The Rev. Dr. Floyd Appleton, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episco-bal Church, left this morning for sunything so gorgeous as the Cossacks which I saw to-day at the Cloos Shop in the Penn-Haratis. One lovely model of pale blue deorgette crepe is particularly attactive, for despite its Russian origin, it flavors strongly of the function of the funeral will take charge of the Church of The Messiah, Brooklyn, for the month of August. Mrs. Appleton and their children date the funeral will take charge of the Church of The Messiah, Brooklyn, for the month of August.

LL work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so we have often been told. Is it not therefore logical to believe that we attain the ideal arrangement only through a well-balanced combination of the two? Some of the greatest educators of the day are strong advocates of this principle, hence they ardently recomment the use of Child Improvement Games. At the Art & Gift Shop, 105 North Second street, an excellent assortment is being shown.
And the mother who supplies her excellent assortment is being shown. And the mother who supplies her youngsters with one or more of the numerous varieties will be amazed at the rapidity with which they learn such furdamentals as spelling, multiplication and the names of birds and animals, while at their play.
