"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LISLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problem of a Girl Wife

CHAPTER CCLVIII
(Copyright, 1919, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

What Val had just said to me amused me because both of us like Jim."

To face a woman I suspect of an interest in Jim has never been easy. Jealousy has always tortured me so that I look at everything from an oblique angle, and twist and distort things out of all semblance to truth. Throbbing heart and burning eyes and a feeling of miserable helplessness always made me the victim of my emotions when I had to deal with a woman I thought attracted to my husband or attractive to him.

So when Val made her insolent and shameless declaration it isn't amazing that for a minute I was submerged under dark waters of misery and distrust. And then suddenly I came up to sunlight and sanity. I laughed. Val stared at me through scornful eyes that widened in amazement as I replied with what was almost a chuckle: "Oh, Val, you are funny! Instead of hating each other because you want Jim's liking, why don't you and Evvy turn and rend me because I have his love? That would be much more in keeping with the problem-play you seem bent on inventing."

Val started back at me as if fascinated. She moved her lips, but didn't speak. I felt myself mistress of the situation because I was mistress of myself, and I enjoyed the feeling. I went on in the calm, superior tone I had elected to take:

"My dear, only his wife or a very clever woman can hope to understand Jim Harrison. I have had the good luck to be his wife. And sometimes I think his sister Virginia and our pal Betty Winston understand him. He's the complete cavalier—chivalrous to all beauty. But he's impersonal in that chivalry, even when he's playing the game most sweetly. And women will misunderstand."

"You are telling me very cleverly that Jim has made a fool of me, aren't you, Anne?" asked Val, her long eyes fixed on me with an expression I couldn't read.

"Dear me—no!" I replied with studied innocence. "He wouldn't. He's chivalrous, as I've told you. And he'd hate to think that the wife of a man he respects and likes as he does Lane Cosby would ever—well, to quote you—make a fool of herself."

Valerie swung out of bed, slipped her arched feet into little amber silk mules and flung a robe of green and amber satin over her chiffon gown. "Thanks for the hint," she yawned. "I'll start practicing the wifely devotion to dear old Lane. And with Tommy for a side line, I'm sure Evvy won't think it worth while to dig around in our family—grave-yard. Perhaps I can fix it so that hauling out of skeleton-in-the-closet won't seem desirable to Miss Evvy."

I stared at Val for a moment in wonder that a woman could confess herself so completely to another woman. Lane Cosby had given me a glimpse into a tragedy, at once big and grim and sordid. And now Val, who had set it all in motion, was calmly planning to go on playing her game with Lane and Tom as usual.

"I'm sure you can manage Evvy—and Tom, too, perhaps," I said with lightness that masked my real meaning: yet I couldn't refrain from adding: "But who is going to manage you—and see that Lane comes to no harm? He's been hurt enough."

"You might look out for Lane—come, let's go out to him now," said Val with an air of finality.

Five minutes later I left the Cosby apartment with a feeling of pity for the man and something akin to hatred for the woman. Val was perched on Lane's knee, assuring him of her love and that no one could hurt her or make her unhappy while she had her big, brown bear. And Lane Cosby, who had only a few minutes before been shuddering on the brink of tragedy, was smiling down at the woman he adored—smiling and believing himself happy.

Once at home I sat and adjusted myself to the tangle I had been compelled to thread that evening.

"Anne Harrison," I admonished myself. "This Cosby affair has just begun. And you're going to be a part in it—look out or it may be a part you aren't fitted to play. You've been able to handle both Evvy and Val in the last week because you have Jim's love to make you strong. You know that even if he has once flirted with either or both of these over-willing women, neither of them means a thing to him now. Jim's yours, Barbara Anne. And you know it. As long as you're sure of that, you hold all the trumps."

But I wouldn't let myself say even to myself what came next in my thought. "As long as you're sure of Jim's love, and hold all the trumps. But how long are you going to be sure of Jim's love?"

A harsh, jangling ring at the door bell disturbed my thoughts. A moment later Bertha came in, holding something back of her apron and assuming a coaxing air that I knew was meant to mask what she considered bad news.

"Have you had your dinner, Ma'am?" she asked. "Well then—do please let me get you a bite to eat before you look at this."

"This" proved to be a telegram—terrifying and full of evil possibilities in my mind Bertha's eyes. I took it and ripped it open, while Bertha stood twisting her apron, waiting to minister to my needs.

"No bad news—" I said, smiling at the girl gratefully. "And I'm starved. It must be all of mine. Is it too late?"

"To get you a bite? Indeed 'tis not, ma'am."

And Bertha vanished in evident relief. The clock chimed. I looked up curiously. Ten. Then I looked down at my telegram again. I had not told Bertha the truth.

It was bad news.

Next War to Break in Far East, German View

Berlin, July 28.—German politicians are intently watching Japanese-American relations as reflected here, in highly distorted form, in reports of the attitude of the American Senate and proceeding by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and an additional five hundred which, it is hoped, will be contributed by other organizations.

William Jennings is chairman of the general health committee, and his request that Harrisburg be liberal in his contributions toward the health fund. The survey conducted in the South Harrisburg by Miss Mary O. Boyd, together with the women of the Survey Committee, acting in conjunction with nurses of the Visiting Nurse Association and State Health Department has laid bare such conditions in these thickly congested districts that the need of health centers is thoroughly demonstrated.

Drive to Raise $4,000 For Use in Cleaning Up City to Begin Soon

The Campaign Committee of the Allied Bodies organization, which will raise $4,000 to carry on the work of making Harrisburg a model city from the standpoint of health and sanitation, preparing to move in mass upon a list of prospects who are cited as likely to contribute toward the fund. The preliminary work of compiling the list, and supplying the campaign committee with their various lists has been pushed practically to completion at the offices of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, and the aggressive campaign will begin at once.

The money is to finance the efforts of the welfare organizations which as a result of the permanent organization formed among their representatives by the Chamber of Commerce, are helping in the project to make Harrisburg a model city. Child welfare, the establishment of health centers in the thickly congested parts of the city, the elimination of the fly and mosquito, establishment of a contagious disease hospital and other items are listed on the program for which the money is urgently needed.

The fund will supplement the women's organizations which have formed a general child welfare committee with Mrs. Lyman D. Gilbert, as chairman, the $500 contributed by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and an additional five hundred which, it is hoped, will be contributed by other organizations.

Donald McCormick is treasurer of the campaign fund which is being raised. William Jennings is chairman of the general health committee, and his request that Harrisburg be liberal in his contributions toward the health fund. Japan Urged as Receiver to Return Stolen Property

Washington, July 28.—Within forty eight hours an announcement is expected through official channels relating to Japan's attitude toward Shantung, which, it is thought, will have a distinct effect on the Senate opposition to the award to the Mikado's Government of rights in the Chinese peninsula by the Peace Conference. The announcement, it is understood, will come from the Japanese Embassy here, or failing that, from President Wilson.

Administration Senators, leading the fight for ratification of the Treaty, understood to-day that the strongest pressure had been brought to bear upon the Japanese Embassy to issue an official statement that would clear up any doubts as to Japan's intention to relinquish its rights on the Shantung Peninsula within a reasonable time, thus removing one of the chief points of objection raised against the Shantung award.

The Japanese Embassy is reported to have got into touch with Tokio within twenty-four hours. The acute situation arising out of the Shantung provisions, which has become a storm-center of attack in the Senate, is understood to have been communicated to the Mikado's Government, together with suggestions more than a diplomatic suggestion, that an expression of Japan's interest in its future control of the Chinese peninsula be made known.

Pinchot's Band Is Due Tomorrow

Gifford Pinchot will be here tonight to take charge of his personally conducted conference of Progressive Republicans which is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, but no one seems to know as yet just who will be here and of what weight will be the men in attendance. Some of the men most active in the Progressive cause several years ago are said to have sent word that they are going to be busy and that they cannot attend.

French Deny Charge of Peace Overtures in '17

Paris, July 28.—"A distortion of the truth" was the characterization applied to-day by Alexandre Ribot to the recent statement by Matthias Erzberger, the German finance minister, declaring that Great Britain and France made peace overtures to Germany through the Vatican in 1917, which Germany rejected. M. Ribot, who was French premier and foreign minister at the time in question made this declaration in a statement to Marcel Hutin of the Echo de Paris.

Mayor of Baltimore to Visit Harrisburg

Mayor Keister to-day received a telegram from Baltimore, stating that Mayor Broening of that city, would arrive in Harrisburg with his party some time this afternoon. The Mayor and his party will be entertained by Mayor Keister and taken to the city to inspect the recent public improvements. It is not known how long Mayor Broening will be in Harrisburg.

Make Your Own Coffee at the Table

You Need Not Bother With a Coffee Pot

How much more convenient it would be if you could make coffee right at the table. Think of the extra bother and fuss eliminated! All this is possible—If you use Hires Instant Soluble Coffee. This was first made for our soldiers in France, who required good coffee that could be easily made. And so Hires Instant Soluble Coffee was developed by the American Army, in the trenches, was Hires. We could not supply more because our facilities would not permit.

Hires Instant Soluble Coffee is the dried pure juice of carefully selected coffee beans of Java and Mocha blend. This clear, aromatic juice is merely converted into a powdered soluble form. The minute you add hot water you have your coffee as originally made. And if you prefer your coffee iced you can have it, for Hires Instant Soluble Coffee dissolves instantly in ice water.

And Hires Instant Soluble Coffee is the concentrated juice of the coffee bean, as for by an exclusive process twice as much juice is taken from the coffee bean as is secured by the use of the coffee pot or percolator. Because Hires Instant Soluble Coffee is so easy to make you can make it right at the table, or can have a clear, fragrant cup any hour of the day or night.

A small can of Hires Instant Soluble Coffee is equivalent to a pound of the best Mocha and Java coffee. The low price is due to the fact that with our exclusive process we extract 100 per cent. more juice from the bean than you can in making coffee in the old way. Get it at all stores.
