Can't "Roll" After 10.30, Says Justice

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—Out of sympathy with "Holy Roller" services because the "rolling" disturbed the peace of the neighborhood, about twenty women testified yesterday against the Rev. T. W. Harston, pastor of the Pentecostal Mission on Frederick road, near McCurley street, when he was summoned by Justice Tormollan.

Neighbors testified that the "rolling" was accompanied by shrieks and groans that continued until late hours, some times even past midnight. Patrolmen Harden and Roth said they visited the services and saw children rolling on the floor and women kneeling around them, moaning and groaning.

Justice Tormollan ordered that the services close at 10.30.

Today Telephone Properties are Returned

AFTER a year of Federal Control, the telephone property, which makes up the Bell Telephone System, is to-day returned to its owners by the United States Government.

While the property has been properly maintained, it is not the same property which the Government took over on August 1, 1918. It is not as adequate for its job or as well manned as it was; that it is not, in no way the fault of Federal Control, which was eminently fair. It is due to causes for which neither the Government nor the companies are to blame.

A year ago to-day we were at war. Labor and materials needed for both telephone operation and construction were turned to military uses. Some materials were so vital to the carrying on of the war that even the work of providing telephone facilities for the Government was retarded and no part of them could be spared for commercial telephone purposes.

No less vital were the Government needs for those skilled to create, maintain and operate the vast intercommunication systems necessary in modern warfare and in the conduct of the vastly increased Government services.

Thousands of telephone men were already at the battle front; thousands more were under arms, and skilled telephone experts and skilled operators went into the service of the Government and contributory industries by the tens of thousands.

The reserves of plant and equipment were drawn upon until they were entirely used up, and the experienced staff was greatly depleted. To find others to take the place of those who had gone was difficult, to train them takes time.

During the year came victory and the armistice; and instantly the business world sprang into intense activity. The demands for telephone service passed all former records.

To replace the exhausted reserves which had been carried for just such purposes and to replace the skilled forces to meet this unprecedented emergency, there began a rush for construction, for readjustment, for high pressure repairs, for feverish extensions. All these must be continued with increasing effort.

The return of the property comes in the very midst of this race between an overpowering demand and an upbuilding of a system whose growth was held back and whose forces were scattered by the vital needs of war.

Much progress has been made in the upbuilding of this system, but far more is still required to meet the swift growth of business; and also to give "first aid" to every other business and every other service struggling against an unprecedented demand.

The prosperity which creates this emergency in service creates also a scarcity of those desiring employment in the service.

Under such conditions, telephone service generally has not been, and could not be, up to the pre-war standard. It is beyond human power to immediately overcome the handicap which the situation imposes.

There are no people in any public or private endeavor who are working more tirelessly or strenuously for the common good than those of the telephone companies. Service has always been given. More of it must be given and it must be improved. That improvement in some cases will take months. Eventually service must win the race with demand.
