He became blind and otherwise infirm, so Veterinarian Alexander put him to sleep. There followed a funeral at the Espenshied home, and tears were shed.

LEWISTOWN DRY FOR DOZEN YEARS SPURTS

Mifflin County Borough Rejoices in Modern Conveniences; in 1889 Frogs Disported in Pond in Center Square; Electric Lights Dispel Gloom and Trolley Cars Move

Probably no town in the State has had greater growth than has Lewistown. In thirty years there has been a change. The town is up to date in many ways. In 1889 Lewistown was a little country town of less than 4,000 inhabitants. The streets in many parts of the town were like country roads and frogs were found in a pond in the center of the town. There were gas lights in those days. The water supply came from Kishacoquillas creek and there was a saying that when Burnham had onions for dinner Lewistown tasted them in the water later in the day. There were no paved streets then, no electric car line and buses drawn by horses hauled passengers between Lewistown and Lewistown Junction. There were no suburbs, just Lewistown proper and the works or industries were the North American Tannery and the Lewistown Foundry and Machine Works.

There were no theaters, no park on Monument Square and but one large public building. Automobiles, of course, were unknown then and the old gray mare had full sway. Houses were then lighted by gas or coal oil and John Davidson, a veteran of the Civil War, sold oil from house to house. A big baseball field was used for games on West Fifth street and a blackberry patch yielded many berries just north of town. Times indeed have changed. The baseball field has long been built up with pretty residences and North Walnut street has taken the place of the blackberry patch. The streets

Some of the furniture and household goods were carried out by neighbors. The efforts of the firemen were directed toward saving the barn. At the residence of William H. Sultzbach, an electrician, the robbers entered the home, went to the third floor and ransacked the room of Frank Shulte. They secured $20 in cash, two ten-dollar bills. A search was made and a man seen in the rear of the yard at the residence of Edgar R. Viles, and stout and wore a slouch hat. Washburn FERRY'S PENN-HARRIS HOTEL BUILDING

SEVEN MUST FACE LARCENY CHARGES

Mechanicsburg, Pa., Aug. 5.—This evening Olen Roney, George Leonard, John Steel, Blair Pittinger, Edward Shultz, John Lightner and Francis Horner, all young men of Carlisle, will appear before Justice William H. Mullin to answer charges of malicious mischief, forcible entry and larceny preferred by Constable Charles Snyder.

Beginning last September and also on different occasions since then these lads, whose ages range from 16 to 22 years, the information charges, have been making visits to the Pine Hill Country Club in middlesex township and the cottage of Albert Swartz, in North Middletown township, and have damaged the buildings and stolen property. Both buildings are near the Conodoguinet creek. At the Pine Hill Country Club guns, pipe, an American flag, several gallons of paint, knives, a large quantity of fishing tackle and other property were stolen. The maverickers broke open every locker in the building, destroyed practically all the contents, tore the bedclothes into strips and threw them into the creek. From the motorboat, the property of John Griffith, which was used by the members of the club going to and from the cottage, they took a carburetor, a lubricator, an oil cup, and brass pipe. The lubricator, which cost $16, was sold to Reuben Eitinger, a Circle junk dealer, for 20 cents. From the Swartz cottage the lads tore every shutter and door and broke every window in the entire dwelling. They then stole three seines, cooking utensils and other property. The stove and stove pipe they took from its place and threw the pipe and plates into the creek. The blinds and all the bedclothing, including woolen blankets were torn into shreds and then thrown into the creek, where it was later found.
