The President seizes the first opportunity to utilize the high cost of living developments to throw upon the Republican Congress the onus of responsibility for present conditions. But he is not going to be permitted to get away with it. His own indifference regarding prompaction on important domestic questions last winter, when he sailed away to Europe after refusing to summon Congress in special session to deal with these matters, is still vividly remembered by his countrymen without regard to political affiliations.

Now comes another effort on his part to shift responsibility by urging to conduct an inquiry into the railroad wage situation as related to the high cost of living. Again a palpable effort to pass the buck from the White House to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee voted to decline to carry out the suggestions made by President Wilson, the chairman of that committee, Senator Cumming, being instructed to write a letter to the man in the White House informing him that it was the opinion of the committee that he and the Director.

It's a good thing, however, that the American people are at heart safe and sound. They will not be swept from their morings by any hysterical or socialistic propaganda from Washington or elsewhere. Too many millions of patriotic citizens have learned what liberty means, as contrasted with license, to follow the dangerous leadership of those who would precipitate an era of Bolshevism upon an intelligent and thrifty and prosperous people.

Public sentiment may be tested to the general sentiment of the country. Here in Harrisburg one may hear at every turn commonsense observations on the political film-flamming of partisans and denunciation of efforts to upset American institutions for the silly philosophy of the degenerate malcontents overseas.

Herbert Spencer, writing from San Antonio, Texas, to Harvey's Weekly, gives these views of a former Democrat:—

"I hope you will continue pounding away at Mr. Wilson and his band of satellites, who I think are responsible for much of the Socialistic, Anarchistic and Bolshevik sentiment now existing in this country.

"This League of Nations is the most ridiculous, absurd, unreasonable and un-American proposition that was ever put forth.

Evening Chat

It's pretty warm to be talking about coal piles, but there are many people thinking about them in Harrisburg according to what the coal men say and what is to be seen about the streets. In fact, from what the managers of two of the city have to say the folks in this city are not only inclined to "shop early" in warm days but to lay in their coal early. "The way orders have been coming to us from householders I am convinced that they read the advertisements," said one man experienced in the ways of Harrisburg. "This used to be one of the worst towns in the State to get people to lay in coal in summer, but the things they went through the last two years have caused them to wake-up and orders for immediate filling are numerous. We have calls for all kinds of coal and cellars are going to be well filled when Jack Frost starts to paint the trees." In addition to this domestic activity there are huge piles of coal being stored by the electric and other companies and regular mountains are to be seen in the upper end of the city where it is hauled from the coal fleets that are so busy in the Susquehanna, at the big electric plants at Ninth and Walnut and at Lochiel. In addition to all this there have been immense quantities bought by industrial concerns and the river coal men will be busy until the river closes to fill the demands. Quite a few housekeepers are going to try to burn river coal, too. The yawning bins at the Capitol are also being filled up and George A. Shreiner, who has been buying extensively, says that he is going to be ready for any winter that comes along. The Capitol went through the hardest part of two winters ago without having to replenish the stock of coal in the bins and there are larger spaces now.

The Capitol park policemen have The Capitol park policemen have a winter uniform that is at once useful and effective. They have been provided with long black raincoats and on the right arm is the State arms in bright yellow. It is a striking change from uniforms heretofore worn, but meets all demands and identified the officers as easily as a cap with gold braid or a red coat.

[From the Philadelphia Ledger.]
All the world dearly loves a fighter for a good cause, as well as a lover, and most folk will take grimsatisfaction in the way that Samuel Gompers is laying about him at the International Trades Union Congress in Amsterdam. There is no mealy mouthed crawfishing on the part of Gompers in refusing to accept the flabby explanations of the German trades union delegates that "they went along" with German militarism during the war." And in his uncompromising attack on this effort of the Germans to evade their full responsibility Mr. Gompers not only voiced the formal protest of the outraged Belgian workers, but he himself represents more nearly than anybody else the view of all work.

These are Capitol visiting days and the midsummer dullness that settles over many public places and in business establishments is not to be found about the office of the guides of the State House. Visitors are going through the big building in shoals and the guides are on duty from early morn until evening. Many of the tourists come to Harrisburg by automobile, but there are whole parties that look suspiciously like car loads. They come from every county and the register is a list of post offices of Pennsylvania, the like of which is hard to find even at Independence Hall.

Eagle on Coin and Ensign

Eagle on Coin and Ensign

[From the Nyack N. Y. Journal.]

The first American gold coinage of eagles, half eagles and quarter eagles of the value of $10, $5 and $2.50, respectively, was placed in circulation December 6, 1792. One and three-dollar gold pieces were formerly coined, but they were discontinued in 1890. The first coin called an eagle was used in Ireland in the Thirteenth Century and was so called from the figure of an eagle impressed upon it, but it was made of base metal. The standard of the eagle was borne by the ancient Persians, and the Romans also carried gold and silver eagles as ensigns,
and sometimes represented them
with a thunderbolt in their talons.
Charlemagne adopted the double headed eagle as the standard of the headed eagle as the standard of the Holy Roman Empire. The eagle was the standard of Napoleon I and Napoleon III. as well as of Austria Prussia and Russia
