FOOD TO GO ON SALE IS FRESH BY TEST

city is sold out, the committee will secure additional supplies from other firehouses. On the success of this sale will depend another order for goods. There is a big supply on at Baltimore and Philadelphia and the local committee will get in communication and endeavor to get another big supply.

It is probable that the next shipment will include oysters, at 12 cents a pound; oatmeal, soup beans, vegetable soup, chicken soup, clam chowder, tomato soup, assorted soups, rice, macaroni, tea, coffee, sugar, cucumber pickles, sweet potatoes, pumpkin, squash, tapioca, lemon extract, flour, jam, pepper, toilet soap and pineapple.

A second supply will depend largely on the success of the sale this morning. If the people of Harrisburg want goods at a low cost and will support the efforts of the local committee, Mayor Daniel L. Keister will do everything in his power to get any commodity the Government has to offer.

There will be other things offered. Bids are now acceptable for bituminous coal, telephone saws, claw hammers, keyhole saws, drilling machines, motors, boring machines, laboratory outfits, cord wood, meat hooks, long-handled coal shovels, steel cots, bench hatches, curry combs, escort wagons. Other cities are making bids for these articles. Buffalo and several cities are asking for prices on shoes, socks, shirts, blankets, towels, underwear, overalls and other household necessities. These will have to be purchased by bids, but it is understood, may be had if a price has been fixed. If the first sale of food is satisfactory, and a second order is filled, Mayor Keister will take up plans to get anything else. In the meantime, any firm interested in articles for which bids are being received can secure information from Lieutenant J. St. Boyle at the Reserve Depot.

There has been some criticism of Mayor Keister's food committee for alleged failure to act promptly in the purchase of government food-stuffs. A member of the committee stated to-day that no criticism of this sort was justified, because the prices first quoted on the government stuff was too high to justify handling in competition with the local dealers. Indeed, he said, there would have been no advantage whatever and no saving. "Now we can offer the food in first class shape," he concluded, "at bargain prices. We shall be ready for the public at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning at the several firehouses and are prepared for the big rush." Chaplain Harry Bassler has substantial evidence of the fact that the canned food which is about to be sold is first class and will meet the requirements of every food housewife. He brought back from the fighting front in France two cans of corn beef which were among supplies captured from the German army. These cans had been purchased in America as early as 1917 and 1918 and are in themselves proof of the preparedness of the Prussian government for the great war which did not start until the summer of 1914.

8 of Every 1,000 Yanks in France Were Killed or Fatally Wounded

Washington, Aug. 14. — Of the enlisted men who fought in the American Expeditionary Force in France, eight out of every 1,000 was killed in one of the 1,000 battles. The battle deaths among emergency commissioned officers were 17 per 1,000 and among officers of the Regular Army 14 per 1,000. These figures were made public by the War Department.

Deaths were far higher in the infantry than in any other branch of the service. Among each 1,000 enlisted men in the infantry 1,000 were killed or wounded. Among each 1,000 in the Signal Corps the casualties were fifty per 1,000; in the Engineer Corps, 43; in the Tank Corps, 25; in the artillery, 33, and in the air service, 2.

Among each 1,000 commissioned officers of infantry reaching France there were 330 killed or wounded; Tank Corps officers, 82 per 1,000; Air Service, 57; Engineer Corps, 52; Artillery, 47; Signal Corps, 25.

Advice to the Lovelorn

SHALL SHE GIVE HIM UP?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am nineteen and have been going out for the past year and half with a young man three years my senior, to whom I am engaged. He is a very nice fellow and I love him and he loves me. I have told him what my mother says and lately it has changed him toward me, for previously to my telling him this, he always showed that he loved me dearly.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I cannot give him up, because he means too much to me, and I could never find another to take his place. He has suggested that we part for a while in order to see if we really and truly love each other, for I have been seeing him from time to time for a week all along. We did not expect to be married for a year at least. I am brokenhearted and I cannot attend to my duties at the office or sleep at night, worrying over it.

BROKENHEARTED. You seem to be in a very painful situation, and I sympathize with you, but it is difficult to give advice without knowing more about you all. For instance, your mother must have some reason for her dislike of the young man. Is it a good reason? If no serious charge has been made against him, it is, of course difficult for you to give him up, or it would be if he didn't himself suggest separation. After all, if you do both truly love each other, your love will stand the test of temporary separation. Let that encourage you.

HOW LONG IS AN EVENING?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: To avoid many rows at home with my parents please let me know whether it is wrong for a girl of twenty when going out with a respectable young man (absolutely good company) to come home at 11 o'clock. It happens that whenever I father a real enjoyable evening my father waits for me, watch in hand, only to create trouble and give me a scolding. I am simply disgusted. Many a time he has insulted my friends just because he wants me to come home at 11 o'clock.

There is only one thing to do, while you make your home with your parents, which is to accede to their wishes. It is not unreasonable to ask a girl to come home at 11 o'clock and 1 o'clock is surely a very late hour. For the unpleasantness that you refer to I should advise your parents were by no means wholly to blame.

THEY DO NOT LIKE HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am an attractive girl of eighteen and quite popular among both sexes. My only distress is the house in which I live. My friends are all refined, and immediately after being escorted home by them I lose them. Please, Miss Fairfax, advise me whether I should urge my parents to move to a better neighborhood, as they can well afford it and wish only my happiness, or should I give up my men friends?

J.E.A.N. If your home is neat, and you can help to keep it so, I see no reason why you should lose friends on account of your home. I am sure you will agree with me that the friends who would come to see you because you lived in a fashionable neighborhood would not be worth keeping. I have known girls who lived in very large, well-furnished houses, who were far more lonely than those across the street in smaller ones. Learn to make your friends welcome at your home at any time and do not let them think that you are ashamed of it. I am sure that the friends really worth having will soon look around you.

Railroad Thieves Steal $70,000,000 in Goods During Control by U.S.

Washington, August 14. — Uncle Sam has had stolen from him since he assumed control of the railroads something like $70,000,000 worth of merchandise from freight cars in terminals and in transit for which the shippers and consignees must be reimbursed. About $15,000,000 worth of freight of this amount was stolen from cars while they were in and around New York City.

According to officials of the secret service of the United States Railroad Administration a great part of the stealing is done by organized bands of car thieves whose machinations are carried on by a systematic process that would do credit to a legitimate business of great magnitude. The goods stolen were everything that is shipped by freight. The stolen goods are handled by "fences" in the principal cities of the country and articles stolen at one point are almost invariably shipped to a near point and sold. Of course to conduct this wholesale thievery it is necessary to have a certain number of railroad employes in on the deal. According to secret service officials these employes are found among a low class of laborers, a great majority of whom are of foreign birth. In some instances which are rare, a carload of merchandise is stolen when the aid of billing clerk or a train crew can be secured to divert a car from original destination.

How on earth did it happen? IMAGINE any first-class, medium-priced car ($1500 or $2000) ever becoming so well liked that even the millionaires would prefer it for their own use to even the highest priced cars. Impossible. You're right. Such a thing couldn't happen with a medium-priced automobile—nor, you would think, with anything else. And yet this "impossible" thing has happened with a medium-priced cigarette. Just note, if you please, the evidence below, at the left. How on earth did Fatima do it? What is it—what does this medium-priced cigarette give that these wealthy smokers prefer to anything given by even the highest-priced cigarettes? The answer is "Just enough Turkish" Until they had tried Fatima, most of these men had been smoking straight Turkish cigarettes—because, of course, until a few years ago these fancy-boxed, expensive straight Turkish cigarettes were practically the only cigarettes on sale at places like those named below. Gradually, however, it seems that these men have learned two things about Fatima: 1. That Fatima's famous blend (containing more Turkish than any other blend) has just enough Turkish for full flavor; and 2. That the blend is so "balanced" as to offset entirely that over-richness or heaviness of straight Turkish. Which proves again that Fatimas are a sensible cigarette—that they leave a man feeling fine and fit even after smoking more heavily than usual. Has your present cigarette—has any cigarette—as strong a claim for your serious consideration as has Fatima? Lightly and sensibly.
