Find Mutinous Crew of Whisky-Laden Boat in Mid Ocean Dead Drunk

London, Aug. 15.—A wireless dispatch received at Queenstown from the British tank steamer War Khan, said that the tanker picked up another steamer in mid-ocean, finding the crew drunk, the captain incapacitated from injuries and some of the other officers in irons. The crew of the War Khan arrested the mutinous crew and supplied enough men to take the steamer to Brest, where it was bound.

Special dispatches from Queenstown say that the ship on which the mutiny occurred was the "American" steamer Marissa. They add that the negro strikers on board mutinied and imprisoned the officers. The ship carried several thousand gallons of whisky. The crew of the War Khan, it is said, found the fires out and the steamer drifting.

WOMAN JUMPS TO DEATH IN VIEW OF WORKINGMEN

Caught by Line Workers as She Floated Down the River

FAILED IN FIRST EFFORT Police Seek Identity of Most Spectacular Suicide in Recent Years

Her dress pinned against her body, a woman of apparently 65 years, and as yet unidentified, committed suicide about 10:20 o'clock this morning, when she jumped thirty-five feet from the railing on the side of the Walnut street bridge into the Susquehanna river. She was practically dead when pulled from the water. A score of persons watched the suicide and joined in the effort to save the woman.

Caught by spectators as she was floating beneath the Market street bridge after being in the water about fifteen minutes, she was drawn by a rope onto the bridge. First-aid efforts by physicians, coupled with their efforts with the Harrisburg Hospital pulmotor when it reached the scene of the occurrence, proved futile. A large quantity of water was drained from her lungs without result.

Failed First Time Gatekeepers at the eastern end of the Walnut street bridge reported that she had paid her toll and walked out on the bridge just a few minutes before they heard her cries, uttered just a few seconds after she hit the water.

It was on her second attempt to throw herself over the railing that she was successful according to a story told by linemen of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. According to their story, the woman, after starting off to the right side of the bridge, crossed to the left side when she was between the second and third piers and climbed on the railing. Attempting to balance herself with the aid of others, which she carried, she slipped back when she reached the rail next to the top.

Linemen called to her, but she again climbed on the railing, poised for an instant at the top and then threw herself over into the water. Several cries for help were uttered by her soon after striking the water, despite the deliberateness of her attempt.

Cast Out Rope Working on the top of the bridge, the linemen of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company hurried towards the floor of the bridge immediately after the woman's first attempt, but were unable to prevent her second successful effort. Realizing this, they grabbed the heavy ropes with which they were working and hastened to the point from which she threw herself into the waters.

Ropes were cast to her, but were of insufficient length and no effort was made to reach them by the drowning woman. Several members of the party were dispatched in efforts to get a boat to attempt to save the woman while others hastened toward the Market Street Bridge.

Comes to Surface Struggling in apparent attempts to save herself, the woman is reported to have come to the surface several times, but when halfway between the two bridges, she sank beneath the surface and floated down stream.

Noticing the woman floating rapidly toward the bridge, the four saucers and the four men gathered in the meantime, preparations were hastily made to lower one of the persons from the Market street bridge to the water, to grasp the woman as she passed beneath the bridge.

Warren Anderson, 237 Prune street, a bricklayer, who was sitting in the park along the river front at the time of the event, at once volunteered himself and after removing his shoes, was speedily lowered, with the heavy rope encircling the chest by the four linemen who had hastened from the upper bridge. These men were Charles Gooding, Brooks Reeder, Peter Jeckell and Paul Gadreau.

Caught at Market Street Floating beneath the surface of the water, the body was grasped by Anderson, who speedily fastened the rope about it and gave the signal for the men to pull it up, while he

BLOCK ACTION ON MEANS TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING

State Agricultural Committee Halts Amendments to Food Control Act Suggested by Attorney Journal

GRONNA HOPES FOR FINAL ACTION TUESDAY AT LATEST

Washington, Aug. 15.—Action on amendments to the food control act suggested by Attorney General Palmer as a means of reducing the high cost of living was blocked in the Senate Agriculture Committee to-day, Chairman Gronna hopes the committee will act finally Tuesday.

Absent members of the House were ordered last night to return to Washington at once, when it became apparent that the Agriculture Committee would report out the new legislation this week. Republican Leader Mondell and Minority Leader Clark declared they were determined to have a quorum present Monday.

Indications of the real punch behind the government's campaign to reduce the high cost of living are being given in unmistakable fashion in many cities. Foodstuffs Seized While Attorney General Palmer was telling the Senate Agriculture Committee that he intended to prosecute every dealer guilty of selling at higher prices than those listed by the fair price committees of each county, word came from Chicago, St. Louis and Birmingham of seizures of great quantities of foodstuffs by Federal officials. Also recently were instructed to proceed under the food control act to stop hoarding. In Chicago, 1,282 tubs of butter, worth $50,000, were seized, in St. Louis 284,180 pounds of coffee, which has been showing rapid alvances in price, and in Birmingham one hundred barrels of sugar. Mr. Palmer told the Senate committee that he believed the great majority of farmers and food dealers were not profiteering, but that the suggested amendment to the food control act extending it to clothing and providing a criminal penalty of $5,000 fine or two years imprisonment, or both, was necessary to make effective the campaign against those who are dishonestly gouging the public. There was a division of opinion among the Senators as to the advisability of the leg-
