Diver Will Attempt to Locate Girl's Body

Itaesc, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Attorneys for Donald W. Fether, the 21-year-old Cornell student charged with the murder of 15-year-old Hazel Crane, who met her death in Cayuga Lake on the night of July 19 last, while a canoe companion of Fether, have obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Supreme Court Justice Michael H. Kiley of Geneva, returnable there Tuesday afternoon. Fether's attorney was ordered to produce the defendant at that time when arguments for his release were heard. Drugging the lake for the body of Miss Crane continues pending Tuesday. A diver, arrived yesterday and announced that he also would make an attempt to locate it.

ENTER, the Festival of Shirts!

Where is it being held? Why, at Douchtrichs, of course. Without a doubt, this is destined to be the biggest shirt week in the history of the Douchtrich establishment. For just $2.89 they are selling the most wonderful $3.50 shirts that anyone could desire. Despite the scarcity of superior fabrics, the quality is excellent and the colorings are of unusual beauty. Artistically blended, they bring out the perfection of the weave and gain an effect such as only skilled artists can produce. Customers are thronging the Douchtrich store, because they know that the opportunity offered is truly a remarkable one.

Lane's SMART APPAREL, SIX SOUTH FOURTH STREET. Our Policy. The fallacy of mere cheapness finds no support at this store. The only way we know how to succeed is to give our customers what they want. Quality is what we look to first. The quality that means satisfaction long after the garment is bought—rather than the short while before and after the purchase. Style is next. Not the bizarre, the extreme, the ridiculous; but the smart, the charming, the garment that is always in good taste. In short, to personalize the styles so that they are compliments to one's individuality. Quality and style assured—we look to our selling price. Small individual profit and many of them, is our way. Every once in a while we have a "Sale." It may be a purchase that embraces extraordinary values, which we want you also to benefit by; or we desire to clear certain parts of our stock,—when profit ceases, and the rapid movement of goods is all that counts. Even then, you will find no sensational statements, no camouflage; just goods. Our advertisements carry the truth only—and there is never any deviation from it. And so long as each who buys here benefits—we shall succeed, which is the answer from our point of view. You Always Pay Less at Lane's

Why I Talk About Values and Service In My Advertising. "I note that very little of your advertising is devoted to describing your actual merchandise. Miss Sachs," remarked a customer recently. "And I've wondered why you pursued a policy so different from that of most stores." "There are several reasons," I replied. "One is that it is impossible to adequately describe goods of the quality I display. A clever advertising writer can employ glowing phrases to make a cheap shoddy frock seem very beautiful. I refuse to compete on that basis. As a matter of fact my shop hadn't been open a month before every woman in Harrisburg knew that my shop displayed goods which were so far superior in style and workmanship to those of any other local store that there were no grounds for comparison. "But there were, and still are, many women who assume that they have to pay more for merchandise of the character of mine. This is a mistake. In the long run a woman saves money by dealing here. She may pay more by the single article but she spends less by the year. That is why I talk values." (In my next advertisement I will give the rest of the conversation which dealt with my reasons for talking service.)
