The senior boys' inter-playground contest finished up the afternoon and then there was a wild rush for the cars. As each car pulled away from the park the youngsters gave loud cheers for those responsible for the party and then settled down to the enjoyment of the ride home. And it was a tired but happy bunch of kids that came home to-night to tell dad and mother what a wonderful day they had at Reservoir.

Attorney General Palmer said there was evidence that the government campaign to reduce the cost of living already was bearing fruit.

"We want to make clear, however," the Attorney General said, "that nothing we can do can change the immutable economic laws on which prices depend. If we can increase the supply by greater production and lessen demand by greater saving on the part of the people, then the cost of living should come down. We can help that along by foreing hoarders to put on the market food held out for an advance in prices."

The Attorney General and Judge Ames, his assistant, drew distinctions, which they said the public should recognize, between hoarded food and stored food. The former is held out of the market in greater quantities than required for the owners' business for the purpose of forcing up the market. The latter is surplus being husbanded from the harvest to the lean season.

Cardinal Gibbons

Cardinal Gibbons was in Philadelphia on a short visit to Archbishop Dougherty, and declared "the Government is doing exactly right in going after the food profiteers."

Cardinal Gibbons had been the guest of Martin Maloney at Spring Lake, N. J., for two weeks, and was on his way home when he stopped off to visit the archbishop.

"All profiteers should be punished, without regard to how powerful or how small they are," declared Cardinal Gibbons. "The merchants and dealers can be expected to make a fair profit, but those who take advantage of the times and conditions and ask and receive more than a fair price for their goods should be punished." He continued: "Profiteering can be justified by nothing and should be stopped immediately, by as drastic measures as are at the command of the Government."

The schedule was adopted at the concluding session of the National Association of Supervisory Post Office Employes' convention, and it is based generally upon the receipts in each office.
