

AMERICANS ARE BUILDING R. R.'S ON RUSS FRONT

Transform 75 Miles of Dynamited and Burned Bridges

Soroka, Russian Lapland, June 30, via London, Aug. 22.—Pushing forward daily into territory of the Bolsheviks and often under fire, the American railway troops on the Murman front in two months transformed 75 miles of dynamited and burned bridges and railways, wrecked and destroyed by retreating Bolsheviks, into a workable railway which they manned, operated and maintained.

To these troops the British command gives much of the credit of the seventy-five mile advance toward Petrozavodsk. In the contingent were 36 officers and 677 men comprising the 167th and 168th companies of railway troops as a special battalion under Major E. E. MacMoreland, Kansas City, and every kind of railroad from a superintendent to a section hand.

The Yanks worked so fast in fact that the Bolsheviks, according to prisoners taken, believed that they had miraculous machines for track laying and adjustable bridges which they dropped in as they went along. It was all done by a gang under Captain C. J. Jones, of Paterson, N. J., who in Alaskan and Latin-American jobs was nicknamed "Hurry-up Jones." Extra work was done seven hours daily with the enemy right ahead and the British artillery right behind awaiting construction. There were also battles and skirmishes in many small sidings where on several occasions the constructors and also the train's crews were under fire.

On May 19, while building a bridge under shrapnel fire, the Yanks were surrounded by Bolsheviks skipping through the woods dynamiting the bridge three versts in the rear. On the next day they repaired the bridge the Yanks were again attacked at close range but managed to escape.

Junk Piles Made Over The shrapnel detachment, under Captain C. E. McMillan, of South America and Panama, formerly from Omaha, had to transform junk pile equipment into workable rolling stock.

Then the Yanks, under Captain H. G. Odell, former assistant and superintendent at Santa Fe, built and operated an eight mile street railway in Murman. Under Lieutenant Chas. B. Tuttle, they operated and manned an armored train.

Railroad men in general drew high pay in Boston, Pittsburgh, or Indiana shared in making these railway enterprises a Yankee success.

More Money Than Ever in Circulation in British Villages

London, Aug. 22.—More money than ever before is now in circulation in English villages, and its easy expenditure is apparent even to the casual passerby. Extra wages earned by workmen, housewives and farm laborers have brought about an astonishing social change.

One evidence of this is seen in the great increase in the number of automobiles and motorcycles, which has necessitated the establishment of countless garages and repair shops throughout the country. Dancing and other clubs are springing up everywhere. Whist clubs are favorites, and the costliness of the prizes for which the members play would, a few years ago, have constituted almost a scandal. The sense of well being and the demand for a more comfortable life is assigned as the cause for this last development. It is taken by sociologists as a permanent thing which is more likely to increase than to diminish.

Mexican Rebel Kills Ninety Men of the Tanhuijo Garrison

Laredo, Texas, Aug. 22.—Killing of ninety men of the government garrison at Tanhuijo formerly Vera Cruz, Mexico, by followers of Manuel Pelaez, the rebel chief of the oil regions, is reported in copies of El Heraldo de Mexico which have been received here. Sixty were killed in defending the town.

According to the published account, the rebel chief forced the commander of the garrison, Lieutenant-Colonel Marquez, to execute the 30 prisoners with a machine gun, later hanging the unfortunate officer up by his heels and shooting him.
