"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LITTLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problem of a Girl Wife

CHAPTER CCLXXXIV
(Copyright, 1919, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

My ankle kept me housed for only a few days. Following the new theories, the doctor strapped it up tightly with adhesive plaster, so the torn ligaments would be held in place. He made me walk a little bit each day in order to keep the bandaged ankle from stiffening. As news doesn't travel very fast among our friends, I was almost ready to be up and about again before people found out that I had been sick. But it's a pretty lonely time of it—and how I did miss the wine jellies and cup custards that would have come pouring in on the household at home!

So I was particularly glad to see Virginia when she came dashing in the very morning that the doctor pronounced me ready to go out for a nice drive in the park.

"I'm so sorry," I said, "I didn't know. What can I do for you, Anne?" asked Virginia contritely, coming over to the couch where I lay trying to get up ambition enough to obey the doctor and to go out for a drive. She stooped and kissed me, laying a wonderful sheaf of late roses in my hand as she spoke. I tried to keep down my pique and to act like a grown woman instead of the hurt child I felt. Jim had been too busy to give me any time during the long day, and after that first evening of kindness Val had disappeared from my ken, telephoning now and then to inquire how I was, but too much immersed in her own concerns to do more than that.

"It's very sweet of you to come," I said, conscious of the absurd trembling of my lips.

"Poor kiddie," said Virginia, stooping to kiss me. "Why didn't you send for me?" Phoebe just heard of your dreadful experience this morning. Neal's been out of town, you know. These have been ugly days, haven't they, dear?"

Virginia's sympathy and understanding astonished me. And when it lasted all through the day I could hardly believe I wasn't running a fever and imagining things in my delirium. She stayed with me until late afternoon and then rushed off post-haste—to avoid Jim, as I very well knew.

Hardly had she departed when Carlotta arrived, bringing some of the latest books and magazines and a wonderful box of marions. And then Phoebe and Neal came, plus a big box of candy and masses of flowers. When Jim came he found me holding court.

SAVE DAYLIGHT BY EARLY START

"Don't Change Clock" and Everybody Will Be Satisfied, Glenn Says

Chicago, Aug. 27.—A way out of the daylight saving difficulty, which, he believes, will satisfy all concerned, is suggested by John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association. The plan, in short, is to shove business ahead an hour in the cities where the daylight saving system is favored and "leave the clock alone."

"There is no reason for any clash in this matter between the city and the country," said Mr. Glenn. "The city people like the plan of shoving the clock ahead one hour during the summer months because they can work to better advantage and also have an extra hour of daylight in the evening. The country people do not like it."

Start Hour Earlier

"All that is necessary," he said, "is for us to start work one hour earlier and quit one hour earlier. If some of our big business organizations will take up this plan, it probably can be adopted. Perhaps the city government would help the move along by taking action that would affect Chicago. Other cities would then follow suit. The plan is a godsend to many in the cities who have little daylight for recreation under the old plan."

"This plan could be adopted by mutual agreement wherever it is wanted."

"In my office, for instance, the hours are from 8.30 to 5.30. If it is agreed that the extra hour of evening is desirable, all we need to do is to make the hours from 7.30 to 4.30, which is just what we are doing now. We do not need to change the clock to do this."

BILL TO SAVE IN PUBLIC PRINTING

House Passes Measure Favored by Pennsylvania Representative

Washington, Aug. 27.—A bill embodying a revision of the printing laws, resulting in a saving of about $500,000 a year to the government, has been passed by the House of Representatives, largely through the efforts of Representative Edgar R. Keiss, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Committee on Printing. The measure is along the lines of the bill drafted several years ago by Senator Smoot, of Utah.

A bill of much the same purport has several times passed one house or the other, but has not become a law. In presenting the merits of the bill to the House, Representative Keiss reviewed the history of attempted legislation of this kind and cited particular instances to show the great waste incident to present methods. The bill was passed without a dissenting vote.

Russian Reds Stir U. S. Negroes Into Strife, Says Secret Service

Washington, Aug. 27.—Russian Soviet interests apparently are supplying funds for a propaganda to stir up race antagonism in the United States, according to information now in the hands of the Department of Justice.

Officials of the department say that charges of an organized propaganda made in the House yesterday by Representative Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, seemed to be well founded. Newspapers, they said, were springing up over the country to spread the propaganda and sow discord among the negroes.

Agents of the Department of Justice far developed lead officials to believe that the propaganda is being financed by the Soviet government and is being spread in Washington and Chicago.

Plan Big Tax to Halt Rum Makers Until 1920

Washington, Aug. 27.—The Anti-Saloon League has a tentative plan to prohibit the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors between the time the President issues a proclamation of peace and the demobilization of the Army and the day the Federal amendment becomes effective by laying prohibitive taxes. It is proposed to put a tax of $40 or $50 a gallon on whisky and a similar sum on a barrel of beer.

Wayne B. Wheeler, legal representative of the league here, refused to give figures, but admitted the tax plan is to be pressed if it looks like an early proclamation from the White House.
