

United States Dominates in Swine Production

Washington, Aug. 29. — The United States contains considerably more than one-third of all the swine in the world. Swine are less numerous than either sheep or cattle in the world at large, but are more numerous than either in the United States, which this year has more hogs than its ten nearest competitors combined.

These facts showing the vast extent of the American hog raising industry are cited by Dr. J. R. Mohler, Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, as "an anchor of confidence for weathering periods of adversity in pork production."

He concludes that pork products have become as well established in the diet of the American people as hogs have become established on farms, and that as more than two-thirds of the total 1918 exports of meat were pork products and more than five-sixths of the animal fats exported were lard, there is a great potential pork-absorbing ability in the densely populated European countries.

PROMPT DELIVERY WINS FOR U. S. IN FOREIGN MARKETS. Geneva. — American commercial activity in Europe, which began immediately after the armistice, continues successfully to advance on a large scale. The secret of the success of the Americans is their prompt delivery of goods, ranging from locomotives to sewing machines, and the long credit given.

The quickness of deliveries exceeds even that of the Germans, who had prepared carefully for the after-the-war rush in trade, while English and French firms, with their slower methods, already have been outdistanced.
