TYRONE

Tyrone, Aug. 29. — Drunkenness is on the increase here. The county now being in a state of Prohibition, one question is asked: "Where do they get it?" On one evening in Tyrone there were at least ten individuals under the influence of liquor, and while this is not so many, it is remarkable on account of many days that have passed with not one inebriate seen. — Tyrone shuts up tight on Labor Day this year. Heretofore only a half-holiday was observed, but the big picnic and parade being held by the Labor Union here this year has overshadowed everything, and the decree went forth that every place of business was to close on this day.—The joy of school children is now short-lived, and the task of school going approaches fast, as on September 2nd, next Tuesday, the school bells will ring calling the kiddies to the houses of learning.—Mrs. George Bonsall, of Akron, O., is spending several weeks in a visit with her sister, Mrs. Charles Wolfgang.—Miss Mary Dickson is enjoying her vacation camping with a party at Vineyard, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. C. Reduce the H. C. of L. in a logical way SHIP By TRUCK
ONE of the biggest factors in the high cost of living in America is our transportation system. Between producer and consumer lies the distributor. Statistics show that, besides enormous losses of perishable goods due to unavoidable delays, our present railway system of transportation is too expensive. This is especially true of food products, which usually have comparatively short hauls and a great deal of spoilage. Bureau of Foods and Markets of New York City declares that the ultimate consumer gives two-thirds of his dollar to the system of distribution. In other words, it costs sixty-five cents to handle thirty-five cents' worth of food.
IT looks as though a great part of the solution of America's foremost problem to-day, the H. C. of L., lies with the motor truck. When the farmer has the opportunity to ship by truck all his produce to some nearby city, the distribution cost will be reduced. The farmer's products will be in the city in so short a time there can be no possible loss, as there has been in the past, of from forty to sixty per cent. of perishable goods. All goods will be safely and quickly delivered at a minimum cost. Economy in transportation of all commodities is a sure means to lower prices. This can be effected only by the use of the motor truck as a means of transportation.
