FULTON MINDFUL OF WAR HEROES

Plan to Erect Memorial to Cost $15,000 in Square at McConnellsburg

McConnellsburg, Pa., Sept. 6.—Following the settlement of all bills for the Welcome Home Celebration recently given in McConnellsburg to the returned soldiers of Fulton county, the finance committee was able to report a balance of more than $275 on hand to be turned over to the fund for the building of a permanent Honor Roll and Memorial to the soldiers of the county.

A convention of delegates representing the different townships of the county was held at the Court house and ways and means discussed for carrying out a campaign all over the county for funds to erect an Honor Roll and Memorial to the soldiers. It was decided that at least $15,000 should be secured for this purpose and that the center square in the county seat, McConnellsburg, should be the site for the erection of this memorial.

The Wonderful Stories of OZ By L. Frank Baum

The Journey to the Nome King's Domain

Having heard the story of Ozma of Oz from her old friends, the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman, Dorothy related to them her own adventures, and then went out with her friends to find the Sawhorse, which Ozma had caused to be shod with plates of gold, so that its legs would not wear out.

First Rode Ozma, with Dorothy Beside Her; Then Came Others

"What a remarkable thing, to be alive!" exclaimed Dorothy. "I quite agree with you," replied the Sawhorse, in a rough but not unpleasant voice. "A creature like me has no business to live, as we all know. But it was the magic power that did it, so I cannot justly be blamed."

"Of course not," said Dorothy. "And you seem to be of some use, because I noticed the Scarecrow riding upon your back."

"Oh, yes; I'm of use," returned the Sawhorse; "and I never tire, never have to be fed, or cared for in any way."

manded the majors and the majors commanded the captains and the captains commanded the private, who marched with an air of profound importance because it required so many officers to give him his orders.

And so the magnificent procession left the palace and started along the road just as day was breaking, and by the time the sun came out they had made good progress toward the valley that led to the Nome King's domain.

"That night Dorothy slept in a pleasant little bedchamber next to that occupied by Ozma of Oz, and Billina perched upon the foot of the bed and tucked her head under her wing and slept as soundly in that position as did Dorothy upon her soft cushions.

though all were restless and anxious to proceed. And by and by the yellow hen came from the bushes saying: "Kut-kut, kut, ku-daw-kut! Kut, kut, kut—ka-daw-kut!"

"What is she doing—singing her lay?" asked the Scarecrow. "Forward—march!" shouted the Tin Woodman, waving his axe, and the procession started just as Dorothy had once more grabbed Billina in her arms.

"If any one goes to get my egg!" cried the hen, in great excitement. "I'll get it," said the Scarecrow; and at his command the Sawhorse pruned into the bushes. The straw man soon found the egg, which he placed in his jacket pocket. The cavalcade, having moved rapidly on, was even then far in advance; but it did not take the Sawhorse long to catch up with it, and presently the Scarecrow was riding in his accustomed place behind Ozma's chariot.

side of the narrow road and swung over its right shoulder was an immense iron mallet, with which it constantly pounded the earth. These resounding blows explained the thumping sounds that they had heard, for the mallet was much bigger than a barrel, and where it struck the path between the rocky sides of the mountain it filled all the space through which our travelers would be obliged to pass.

"Of course they at once halted, a safe distance away from the terrible iron mallet. The magic carpet would do them no good in this case, for it was only meant to protect them from any dangers upon the ground beneath their feet, and not from dangers that appeared in the air above them.

"Wow!" said the Cowardly Lion, "What shall I do with the egg?" he asked Dorothy.

"I do not know," the girl answered. "Perhaps the Hungry Tiger would like it."

"It would not be enough to fill one of my back teeth," remarked the Tiger. "A tushel of them, hand boiled, might take a little of the edge off my appetite; but one egg isn't good for anything at all, that I know of."

"No; it wouldn't even make a spongy cake," said the Scarecrow, thoughtfully. "The Tin Woodman might carry it with his axe and hatch it; but after all I may as well keep it myself for a souvenir." So he left it in his pocket.

They had now reached that part of the valley that lay between the two high mountains which Dorothy had seen from her tower window. At the far end was the third great mountain, which blocked the valley and was the northern edge of the Land of Ev. It was underneath this mountain that the Nome King's palace was said to be; but it would be some time before they reached that place.

The path was becoming rocky and difficult for the wheels of the chariot to pass over, and presently a deep gulf appeared at their feet which was too wide for them to leap. So Ozma took a small square of green cloth from her pocket and threw it upon the ground. At once it became the magic carpet, and unrolled itself far enough for all the cavalcade to walk upon. The chariot now advanced, and the green carpet unrolled before it, crossing the gulf on a level with its banks, so that all passed over it safely.

with a shudder. "It makes me dreadfully nervous to see that big hammer pounding so near my head. One blow would crush me into a doormat."

"The iron gi-ant is a fine fellow," said Tiktok, "and works as steadily as a clock. He was made for the Nome King by Smith & Tin-ker, who made me, and his duty is to keep folks from finding the underground palace. Is he not a great work of art?"

"Can he think, and speak, as you do?" asked Ozma, regarding the giant with wondering eyes.

"No," replied the machine; "he is on-ly made to pound the road, and has no think-ing or speak-ing at-tach-ment. But he pounds ver-ry well, I think."

"Too well," observed the Scarecrow. "He is keeping us from going farther. Is there no way to stop his machinery?"

"On-ly the Nome King, who has the key, can do that," answered Tiktok.

"What shall we do?" "Excuse me for a few minutes," said the Scarecrow, "and I will think it over."

He retired, then, to a position in the rear, where he turned his painted face to the rocks and began to think.

Editor's Note.—Next week we shall hear of the plan the Scarecrow evolved for getting by the Giant with the Hammer, of the splendid way in which the Cowardly Lion overcame his fear, and of the accident which befell the Wooden Sawhorse.

ENDERS

Enders, Pa., Sept. 6.—Sergeant Marvin Webster has just returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster, from overseas service. He received several slight wounds while in action. Advertisement for Pea Coal. Pea Coal Likely To Advance In Price. COAL OPERATORS will probably advance the price of pea coal 75 cents per ton as soon as cold weather comes to stay. The price of Egg, Stove and Nut Coal was advanced 95 cents per ton from July 1st to September 1st, inclusive. In the same period the price of Pea Coal was advanced but 20 cents per ton.

Advertisement for United Ice & Coal Co. In recent years it has been customary to increase pea coal prices in the same amount as the larger sizes. We expect the additional 75 cents will be applied when the demand for coal becomes intense. The coal you buy now is much better quality than will be shipped under winter mining conditions. Coal is always better prepared when mined and shipped in mild weather. We can give you a good quality of Hard, Soft, or Mixed Pea Coal.
