The Civic Club has many plans for the fall, and now that they have their own building the winter will be a very successful one.

Linen

Everyone interested in art needle work knows how difficult it was to secure quality linen during the period of the war, and even at the present time it is scarcely less difficult.

Linen has been hard to secure, but these shops are offering genuine Irish and English weaves of pre-war quality in both texture and material.

Lengths cut from bolts for pillow cases, handkerchiefs, and every purpose for which linen is demanded.

Stamping Hand in hand with the linen goes the stamping. The variety of patterns shown by this shop for all pieces for which stamping is desired, makes selection easy. The newest designs are being shown in many forms.

Monogramming Especially does monogramming appeal. Marking one's linen with a distinctive design does not present the difficulty it did when every monogram had to be especially designed. Many designs are shown here which permit combinations of any letters desired.

All accessories such as cottons and mercerized cottons, hoops, etc.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

I WAS talking to Mrs. Vania Forster several days ago and I feel that I just must repeat some of the interesting things she told me. We were discussing hemstitching, and for the first time I realized what a really useful thing it is. In fact, as the outcome of our conversation, I learned how I can procure some exquisite linen napkins at almost no cost at all.

At the same time, I shall be utilizing a tablecloth that has weakened in several places and is unfit for service in its present capacity, but when cut into napkins and hemstitched by Mrs. Forster, will take a new lease on life. Incidentally, it will only cost me 10 cents a yard to attain the transformation, for that is what she charges to hemstitch all materials. And for that exceptionally reasonable sum I can have my curtains, towels, blouses, dresses, lingerie, or any bit of household linen, beautified—and so can you!

When you are making a dress or any other garment on which you wish to save work and at the same time increase its attractiveness, take it to 810 North Second street, let Mrs. Forster pick it and you will discover to your amazement that she has completed the work almost before you can say "Jack Robinson."

If a vote were to be taken on the most popular "eating" place in town, 10 to 1 the Penn-Harris would win, for in both the coffee room and the main diningroom the delicious roundday luncheons have made such an appeal to the people of this city and vicinity that many folks refuse to dine elsewhere.

The menus are carefully prepared and experts skillfully blend the ingredients used in the various palatable and tempting dishes. Then, too, the service leaves nothing to be desired. That is why so many women insist upon meeting their husbands downtown and partaking of an excellent noonday meal in either the coffee room or the hotel proper.

Knowing that they thereby save time, effort and money. Just try a 75-cent lunch and see whether you could prepare one as good for the price.

Did you ever hear the legend of the old Arab who was traveling across a desert and who, when eventide came, reached an oasis, where he encamped for the night? While preparing his evening meal, so we are told, he noticed a tree nearby bearing dark scarlet berries. Attracted by the beauty of the fruit, he plucked a handful and discovered that each one contained two small seeds. Several of these he accidentally dropped into his drinking water, and, on tasting it, marveled at the flavor. So, plucking as many of the berries as he could find, he carried them home to his wife, who brewed therefrom a delicious drink and called it "coffee." And from that day forth people the world over have been lovers of the beverage thus discovered.

Only, to-day we need not search in oasis glades for the scarlet fruit. Why should we, when the Grand Union Tea Company, 208 North Second street, brings the most superior coffee to our very midst?

DESIGNED to brave all winds becomingly is the clever suit of brown Heatherstone that the Cloos Shop is showing. Its soft, warm collar of genuine beaver dares Jack Frost to nip Milady's chin, if he can, and its straight lines in front contrast pleasingly with the blouse effect in the back of the coat. Then the buttons—we dare not forget to mention the buttons—are exceptionally attractive. In their effort to be just a little "different," they have chosen an odd, unusual shape and present a long, narrow appearance that offers one food for thought as to whether they look more like big, shiny bugs or delicious dates. Personally, I haven't been able to decide and I'd love to have your assistance. So, go take a peep at the garment.

PICTURES, pictures everywhere—ah, yes; but what a contrast we find! Some are genuine works of art that have stood the test of the ages, while others are not worth the space they occupy. With the latter we do not bother, but the former demand our interest and attention. They are well worth possessing for our own, and many of us pride ourselves upon the copies of masterpieces which hang upon our walls. But, if we are discriminating, we also pride ourselves upon our choice of frames, for we realize that an artistic, appropriate frame is essential to the beauty of a picture. Another person who realizes the same thing is Mr. Saltzger, and at his Art and Antique Store, 223 North Second street, one is sure of having framing done in just the proper way.

The High Cost of Dressing

"Prices seem rather stiff this season," I complained to a New York maker the other day. "We never thought of paying such figures a few years ago. What's the reason?"

"Well, of course, the dollar isn't worth what it once was," he replied, "but then it's easier to get. But so far as clothes go people pay more today, to be sure, but also they get more."

"Look at a woman's shoe today at say $15 a pair. Ten years ago she paid $5. But then compare the shoes. One was a primitive covering for the foot; built for utility. And it was hidden by skirts. The other is an exquisite work of art, designed with all the skill and feeling for beauty of line that enter into the design of a yacht, or a lovely bracelet. Women demand more luxury and beauty. It's expensive."

"The same is true of dresses. There's more work involved; the finish is finer, the trimmings more sumptuous. Once a touch of fur sufficed, now it's a quantity."

"No, the high cost of dressing is chiefly due to one thing; the demands of the customer. It's a case of Cherchez la femme."

I wonder if there isn't a lot in this suggestion?

Two Killed, Two Others Injured in Outbreak of "Black Hand" War Philadelphia, Sept. 15.—Two men were killed, and two others injured in a clash among Italians in a restaurant in the southern section of the city early to-day. Police are of the opinion that the shooting is a renewal of a "Black Hand" war which has waged among factions here and New York City since last October. Giovanni Cancelli, one of the killed, was under indictment for having shot and wounded February Zelli last October and the shooting to-day, according to the police, is the climax of the former fight. In the feuds in October three men were killed and several wounded. Members of the Italian colony in New York and this city were implicated. Police declare that jealousy of a member of one of the bands over a woman instigated the vendetta. Six men and the wife of the restaurant owner were arrested as witnesses.
