HOVERTER AND HARTMAN WIN IN EASY FASHION WITH REPUBLICAN LEADERSHIP ENDORSED AT POLLS

Oves Defeats Weber In Republican Candidate Very Close Contest; Keister Forgotten

"INDEPENDENT" MOVEMENT IS SNOWED UNDER WITH BALLOTS

The results of yesterday's primary elections in Harrisburg and Dauphin county are a complete triumph for the Republican organization and a vindication of the leadership of Lieutenant Governor E. E. Beidleman and W. Harry Baker. Without a single exception the list of candidates sponsored by Mr. Baker, as chairman of the candidates committee, and announced by him in an interview published last week, won out by such decisive majorities that there is no question of a great Republican victory at the polls in November.

The only contest of any consequence, as the returns show, was between Harry F. Oves, chairman of the Republican city committee, and Clarence E. Weber, for the city treasurership nomination. Oves, the choice of the organization, won out by 361 votes, according to unofficial returns, polling a total of 5,303 votes, as compared with 5,042 for Weber.

George A. Hoverter, for mayor, piled up a total of 6,890 votes by a considerable majority more than all of the votes for all the other candidates for the office put together. On the Democratic side, the McCormick faction's candidate for mayor was through with a majority of less than 300 over William M. Mc-Nair, the labor candidate, but both Democratic candidates received a total of only 1.251 votes, which, compared with the Republican total, is so insignificant as to indicate that Mr. Hoverter will have a tremendous majority at the general elections

In the county the regular ticket was nominated by the Republi-cans by equally decisive votes, Phillip S. Moyer, the organization candidate for district attorney, carrying the election over Edward F. Doehne, the leader of the so-called "independent" ticket by a majority that is growing as rapidly as the precinct totals are re-

F. Dochne, the leader of the So-called "independent" totals are received.

An Organization Victory
The effort of the so-caled "Independents" on the Republican side was in effect an attempt to wrest the party control from the hands of the younger element and replace it by a leadership in which some of those prominent in the affairs of the organization before the advent of Lieutenant-Governor Beidleman and his friends as leaders in party affairs here, were to be the controlling factors. This was plainly evident at the polls yesterday. The issue was squarely met by Mr. Beidleman and W. Harri Baker as chairman of the candidates' committee who came out in the newspapers with a list of candidates for whom they stood sponsor, every one of whom was nominately yesterday.

The victory for the organization was complete in every respect and the endorsement by the voters of the fact that the organization as a present constituted has at no time given its support to a candidate who has not made good in public office. The most determined effort of the "Independents" falled to shake the publicant served by the fact that the organization as a provident of the public of the returns were all in his the leaders of the fact that the organization as a provident of the condidate who has not made good in public office. their opponents Howard O. Holstein, candidate for lieutenant governor last year, and ex-Sherifi Harry C. Wells, who is the present minority commissioner. It is evident that only one of these two can be elected and it is expected that Wells will receive organization support as Holstein was opposed by McCormick when he ran for the second office in the gift of the State in 1918. Wells also has been somewhat of an independent in his refusal to take orders from headquarters and the likelihood is that the whole Democratic campaign will revolve around

Retires to His Bed

GEORGE A. HOVERTER

George A. Hoverter, who yesterday won the Republican nomination for Mayor, to-day is confined to his bed. He has been suffering with a slight attack of kidney trouble for the past week, but has managed to keep going until the primaries. Last evening he returned home, much wearled by the pre-election strain, and decided to rest for several days. He has nothing to say on the election at this time, he says. His condition is not serious.

Crippled Children of County Washington Pays Homage to Found in Dire Want of Attention

LITTLE ONES CHEERFUL ALL PERFECTLY GROOMED

Expert Workers Look After Men, Animals and Equipment Helpless Cripples So Far as Funds Go

In Small Valley, away back in the mountains of the upper end of Dauphin county, a charming little girl of 11 years is waiting eagerly the coming of an automobile that will bear her away for consultation with a famous specialist who hopes will be able to walk like other children, and go to school, and learn to read and write.

On the outskirts of Elizabethville a little lad, orphaned by the flu epidemic, lame since his birth, is counting the days until the car shall come to bear him away to Philade'phia, where it is hoped he will be made like other boys.

Near New Bloomfield a heart-broken mother watches over a baby girl of 4, who has never been able to walk or talk since birth, and prays that the Red Cross will be able to bring her little one back to her in the way of becoming a normal child.

In a cozy home in Lykens a bright girl of 11 is rejoicing that she is to have new braces to help cure the evil results of infantile paralysis, which left her unable to walk without assistance. Work of the Red Cross

And the Red Cross is the agency to which all of these, and many more like them in the Harrisburg district, are looking for relief and district, are looking for reltef and succor.

It happened in this way: Mrs. William Jennings, chairman of the Home Service department of the Harrisburg Chapter, and Miss Margaret Ringland, the secretary, who is also a trained nurse, had discovered many things in their rounds of the community during the war that troubled them. Under the rules of the Red Cross, only families or dependants of men in the servic could claim the benefits they had to offer. But the two and their volunteer assistants discovered many others who needed help.

When the war closed, Mrs. Jennings asked of Mrs. Lyman D. Gilbert, chairman of the Harrisburg Chapter, and Mrs. Robert McCormick this question:

"If the Red Cross during the war is justified in sending aid to the suffering people of France and Belgium, why should it neglect our own sufferers, old and young, at home who are sorely in need of the blessings it alone is qualified to bring:"

"If the Red Cross during the war is justified in sending aid to the suffering people of France and Beligium, why should it neglect our own sufferers, old and young, at home who are sorely in need of the blessings it alone is qualified to bring?"

The answer, of course, was that Red Cross ought to do for its own home folks as much, at least, as it [Continued on Page 13.]

FIRST PASSES IN LAST GRAND REVIEW OF WAR

General Pershing at Head of Fully Equipped Division

Spotless; Crowd Voices Appreciation

Washington, Sept. 17. — Amid a roar of welcome, General Pershing led the First Division of the American Expeditionary Forces up Pennsylvania avenue to-day to receive the nation's homage.

It was the last grand review of the war-time Armies, the victory parade, the last chance for the hundreds of thousands of men, women and children jammed along the route to voice appreciation of the valor and daring of that Army and they made the most of it.

The procession reached its climax as the man who captained all the fighting forces of the nation in the great struggle, passed through the victory arch toward the reviewing stand, where vice-president Marshall stood, representing President Wilson to receive the general's salute. Behind him the picked thousands of the composite regiment "Pershing's own" formed a wall of bronzed faces as they swung into line with machine-like precision.

Groomed to Perfection

From the general himself to the last man of the tank battalion that brought up the rear of the marching column in perfect fighting machine, a shock division of the American Army in the war, was groomed to regular Army perfection. Men, horses, guns and machines, to the last buckle and the final touch of paint, were completely equipped and spotless, for inspection. There was no need of war-worn gear to tell of their deeds. The gleam of gold chevrons on every arm, the ribbons of decorations for valor on their collars and breasts, the marks that spoke of wounds received that were sprinkled through the whole command, and above all the proud knowledge in the hearts of the thousands that cheered them, made that unnecessary.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the great line of fighting men began moving

Arnold W. Brunner, architect in charge of the Capitol extension developments and designer of the proposed Harrisburg memorial at Thirteenth and State streets, explained at length the details of his plan to the members of the Memorial Committee of One Hundred and Twenty-five at luncheon at the Harrisburg Club at noon to-day. The committee unanimously endorsed the plans as outlined, which embrace a great circular base of marble with marbic seats around the eastern side, the center of which is to be a bronze pillar surmounted by a flagpole. To the rear the part of the street which is now given over to grass-plots, is to be turned into a beautiful bit of formal park, with marble and bronze fittings, the whole to be a setting for the eastern approach to the State street memorial viaduct.
