answering a call should be forced to be under the very embarrassing necessity of accepting stated gifts of money from members of their congregation. These gifts, of course, put the pastor under a direct personal obligation which is very distateful. It seems to me that the congregation should take up the question of increase in wage, and tell the man they are calling exactly what he is to receive, instead of paying him a certain sum and then offering him various gifts throughout the year."

Conditions investigated

"Some time ago," went on Dr. Mudge, "I was appointed along with several other clergymen to investigate the salaries of ministers in the Carlisle Presbytery. We took the matter up with the various congregations and managed to secure in the majority of cases a better salary for the pastor. Many of them were getting far less than ordinary unskilled labor. Why, I would venture to say that right here in Harrisburg there are pastors who are not receiving a fifth of the salary which engineers and conductors who make up a portion of their congregation are getting. The strike idea is ridiculous: the average minister in the tell and the committee with a men who work with their direct that the intelligent lay the interest of the Friendship and are chother or mith the intelligent lay with the intelligent lay will be rescued in the pastor's congregation whether or no he is to receive a lighter along the results of a pastor's congregation whether or no he is to receive a migher salary. proaching the foolish level, but agreed with the Baptist clergyman that the average minister is woefully underpaid.

"The average artisan," said Dr. Bagnell, "is to-day receiving three, four and five times as much as the average preacher. It takes possibly a year or so to make the average laborer. It takes more than a decade to make a minister worthy of his calling and fitted to occupy the position that he should occupy in the community. But there is one thing that the laity must realize, namely this: The appeal for more salary will never come from the clergy. It is an unwritten law that clergymen do not discuss their salaries with each other or with their churches.

It rests with the intelligent lay skilled labor. Why, I would venture to say that right here in Harrisburg there are pastors who are not receiving a fifth of the salary which engineers and conductors who make up a portion of their congregation are getting. The strike idea is ridiculous; the average minister feels himself to be a public servant with a definite duty not only to his church but to the community as well."

Woefully Underpald

Dr. Robert D. Bagnell, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, agreed heartily with the sentiment of Dr. Mudgo. Dr. Bagnell scored the strike statement as not even appoint of the strike statement as not even appoint of the splied if good clear skin is wanted. "The best men are not going into the church anymore said the Rev. Mr. Smucker, and it is all on account of the low salaries. Don't think that it is from a selfish viewpoint that these men refuse to go into the ministry; on the contrary they are deeply grieved at their inability to do so, but they cannot possibly get along on the average
