"When a Girl Marries"

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problem of a Girl Wife

Copyright, 1919, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Toward noon the day after Carl Booth's breakfast dinner, Daisy Condon telephoned me. It was the first time she had ever taken the initiative, and I was concerned, but I didn't deceive myself into thinking it indicated growing friendliness for me on the part of "Kate's little sister."

"Would you lunch with me this noon, Mrs. Harrison?" she asked, adding hastily in anticipation of my hesitation to let her spend money on me. "Really, you'll be paying for your own lunch out of the five dollars and a half I won from you at bridge last night. I want to see you and I can well afford to treat to-day, you see."

"All right I'll see you, but I hate feasting off your ill-gotten gains," I agreed with a mental reservation that I would take the lunch check, despite the fact that I remembered the old days when I'd resented all ways having to be off. Her eyes twinkled. It was easy to see that the habit of being so happy and happy might easily light Daisy's sullen and drab little face to piquant prettiness.

"In case I wasn't bluffing about those party things, I'm glad to hear you order the cheapest and most filling things you can find. Really, Mrs. Harrison, you're a regular guardian angel."

I felt my face crimsoning. It might have been more amusing if it hadn't been so annoying. "I want to be your friend Daisy," I said, trying not to have it sound prim and stodgy.

Daisy's eyes widened and stared at me.

"I guess you would, too—if you knew how," she said. "And perhaps things would have gone the same way even if you hadn't come along. Well, after all, no one can do better than their best. Now your best is a recommendation to Mr. Mason. I've resigned at Haldane's and I'm going to Mr. Mason's office."

"How do you know what my prospects with Mr. Mason are?" interrupted Daisy pertly.

"I can't know of course, unless you choose to tell me. But at Haldane's you might come to be literary editor some day. You have a splendid position now. You're about to come into personal touch with Mr. Haldane and your own ability and willingness to work ought to do the rest."

"Literary editor, indeed!" laughed Daisy scornfully. "Fifteen years from now, maybe, and I'm sick of the old galley and cuts and forms. I'm sick of the smudgy proof sheets and the bang of the presses up in the composing room. I like beauty in my work. I've resigned I tell you. We needn't discuss Haldane's any longer."

"All right," I said gravely. "What are we to discuss?"

"Why, your standing sponsor for my character. Ordinarily Mr. Mason says, he'd ask anyone who was to take charge of a place like his up-town studio to give him a bond for at least $5,000. Of course, I can't do that. And I wouldn't feel I could ask you to either. But if you'll just tell him how you feel about me—"

Her words made me start.

"And what must that be?" I asked interrupting in turn.

"Why you've shown how that is. You've taken me about socially. You got me this dress. I know it's all for Kate—but this is for her, too. I want to get away from Haldane's. You've made me see I have to. I can't stand the strain of being there with him. No one else can. Please don't say a word, I'm trying to forgive you, but I can't talk about it to you."

"But Daisy, I haven't changed anything for you. My friendship with him—dates back to the time when you were a little girl. I can't be melodramatic and make a large gesture of putting an old friend who is just that and no more out of my life—can I?" I replied with no pretense that I didn't fully understand.

"Will you please not talk about it?" asked Daisy wearily. "I'm not blaming you for being beautiful and desirable and making men forget. I'm not saying that you'd come between me and what I want if you could help it. But you have spoiled my chances. You've spoiled what I think was my one chance at Haldane's. I think you almost spoiled my life. Now will you dare discuss it or protest?"

"Yes, I dare!" I said hotly. "You are all wrong. Love and friendship are separate institutions. Friendship doesn't satisfy a man. And it can't make love less necessary to him. You will get what belongs to you. I don't change that."

"Oh, perhaps he doesn't care at all. Perhaps he never did. Never could. I'm not attractive. Let's not go into that!" muttered Daisy. "Only I know what I know. He's changed since you came back into his life. Don't make me humble myself any longer. I want to get away. I want to work for Mr. Mason. He'll give me my way out and ten dollars more a week than I am getting at Haldane's. It only depends upon you. You've only to say the word. Will you? Do I get the job?"

"It depends on me," I repeated dully.

"On you! It's my chance. Do I get it?"

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

If you are suddenly becoming stout, or if you have been putting on flesh for years, the cause is generally the same—lack of oxygen carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs mostly in men and women over thirty but it may be easily treated and without the privations most fat people imagine necessary to reduce their weight. Simply go to your drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Take five grains after each meal and at bedtime. Wonderful results should be quickly accomplished by this simple treatment.

Be sure however you get the genuine Pills. The original is in original sealed packages, is pleasant to take and gives prompt results. Gorgias, the original, is sold at 15 N. Third and Walnut Sts., and Penna. R. R. Station. C. Keller's Drugstore and George's Drugstore can supply you.

THE PANGS OF RHEUMATISM

Cannot Be Rubbed Away With Liniments

You who are afflicted with this most painful disease—who know from experience just how excruciating its pangs are—get this fact fixed firmly in your mind and it will aid you in finding a way to a complete recovery. Rheumatism cannot be rubbed away with liniments, — its pains and pangs cannot be wiped out as if by magic. A disease that is so full of torture and finally renders its victims so helpless, is a deep-seated one; it is not on the surface, hence it cannot be reached by external, surface remedies. This is no theory, for our own experience doubtless has shown you that you can never expect to rid yourself of the disease in this way.

For the chances are that you, like thousands of other sufferers, have been misled into the hope that liniments, lotions and other applications would cure your rheumatism. But what has been your experience? The pains possibly have been lessened for the time being, but have they not promptly returned, often with increased severity, and are you really any nearer a cure than before? You certainly are not, and you never will be as long as you rely upon treatment that at best is merely a makeshift.

See what Mr. J. L. Agnew, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, says of what S. S. S. did for his rheumatism:

"For ten years I was badly afflicted with Rheumatism, the pains in my knees, legs and ankles being almost unbearable. I tried various remedies with no results, until a physician advised me to use S. S. S., stating that his medicine was in the blood. After taking a few bottles the pains and soreness were greatly lessened. I continued this medicine until all pain, soreness and inflammation were gone, and I was completely cured."

J. J. AGNEW,
806 E. Gambier Street,
Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

This is a typical case, and everyone who has had the slightest experience with rheumatism will continue to suffer and grow worse until they are finally practically helpless, unless they realize that the disease must be combated at its source. Rheumatism is often a diseased condition of the blood, the disease attacks the body through the blood, hence the system can be rid of its pains only after the blood has been cleansed of the germs of the disease.

Lotions, liniments and ointments, applied to the surface may in some cases deaden the pain for the time being, but until you attack the disease at its foundation, you are making no progress toward a cure, and you are permitting the trouble to get a firmer hold on your system every day. This is one reason why Rheumatism is usually a permanent disease, staying with its victims year after year. Getting rid of the disease is merely a matter of treating it intelligently. Knowing that it cannot be cured by external applications, it is folly to rely upon such treatment.

S. S. S. is without question the most thorough blood medicine ever made, and it cleanses the blood of every impurity and disease germ. That is why it seldom fails to give satisfactory results in even the severest cases of Rheumatism. Being purely vegetable without a particle of mineral or chemical in its composition, it works by eliminating and forcing out of the blood all impurities, acting as a tonic to the entire system at the same time. It has been in use for more than fifty years and thousands of sufferers from rheumatism give it unstinted praise.

You are invited to write our medical department for full information and advice about the treatment of your own case, for which no charge is made. Address Swift Specific Co., 27 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

WHEN TO GATHER ROOTS AND HERBS

For medicinal purposes, roots and herbs should be gathered when their medicinal properties are at their best. For instance, roots of annual plants should be dug just before their flowering season, and roots of biennial or perennial plants after the tops have dried. All these things are taken into consideration in gathering the roots and herbs, many tons of which are used annually in preparing that most successful of all remedies for man's ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

OCTOBER 24 TO BE ARBOR DAY

Dr. Finegan Proclaims That Day For the Care of Trees and Care of Birds Too

Friday, October 24, was to-day proclaimed by Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, the new Superintendent of Public Instruction, as autumn arbor day and bird day for Pennsylvania.

The proclamation is directed to "citizens, school directors, superintendents, teachers and the children of the Commonwealth," and says, in part:

There is no State in the union whose natural resources are more varied or more valuable than the natural resources of Pennsylvania. A noted writer recently referred to our Commonwealth as the "Industrial Titan of America." The industrial supremacy of the State depends in a large measure upon her coal, iron, forests and rivers. The vast mountain forests, the numerous rivers and streams and the delightful scenery have made the land of Penn the abode of a large variety of summer and of winter birds. The birds exercise a great influence upon any phases of agricultural life, and the forests, streams and birds not only influence economic and commercial affairs, but they are agencies of great value in promoting the health, the social conditions and the happiness of our people.

The school may not, therefore, render a greater service to the State than to inculcate in every child under its influence a spirit to conserve every natural resource and to protect every useful bird. Every citizen of the Commonwealth should be educated to feel that the waste of any of our natural resources is a national injury and an offense to the good name of the State. I, therefore, suggest that on the day set apart for the observance of the autumn arbor day and bird day that the schools co-operate with the public and with all organizations desiring to promote the best interests of the State by holding such appropriate public exercises in the schools or elsewhere as shall school children be educated to feel that the waste of any of our natural resources is a national injury and an offense to the good name of the State. I, therefore, suggest that on the day set apart for the observance of the autumn arbor day and bird day that the schools co-operate with the public and with all organizations desiring to promote the best interests of the State by holding such appropriate public exercises in the schools or elsewhere as shall school children be educated to feel that the waste of any of our natural resources is a national injury and an offense to the good name of the State.

THOMAS E. FINEGAN,
State Superintendent of Public Instruction,
Harrisburg, Sept. 18, 1919.

O suns and skies and clouds of June,
And flowers of June together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour
October's bright blue weather.

—Helen Fliske Jackson.

Don't kill the birds, the happy birds,
That bless the fields and grove;
So innocent to look upon,
They claim our warmest love.
The happy birds, the tuneful birds,
How pleasant 'tis to see!
No spot can be a cheerless place,
Where'er their presence be.

—Colesworthy.

From Autumnal Dreams
When the maple turns to crimson
And the sassafras to gold,
When the poplars in the meadow,
And the aster on the gold,
When the noon is lapped in vapor,
And the night is frosty-cold.

When the chestnut burrs are opened,
And the acorns drop like hail,
And the drowsy air is startled
With the thumping of the fall—
With the drumming of the partridge
And the whistle of the quail.

Through the rustling woods I wander
Through the jewels of the year.

—Bayard Taylor.

VETERANS WILL BE GREETED BY SPROUL

CITY MAKES FINE RESPONSE

Harrisburg's response to the call for contributions to provide for the supper for the returned soldiers during the homecoming celebration has been so generous that Mrs. William Jennings, chairman of the supper committee, to-day issued a request that women of the committee at once cease all solicitation of contributions. An abundant supply of cakes and fruit has already been contributed and enough money is on hand to provide for other articles needed.

registered at the officers of the Chamber of Commerce will receive an invitation, and will be entitled to a medal, and participate in the welcome home demonstration. Every man who has not yet registered is urged to do so to-day.

Mayor Daniel L. Keister will make the presentation speech during the Sunday afternoon service, outlining the gratitude felt by Harrisburgers for their service men. The presentation of the medals will be made by a corps of Red Cross girls.

Several local veterans will receive official citations from officials of the War Department during the service. They are Major Samuel W. Fleming, Sergeant Grover Speckart, and a posthumous award will go to Timothy Naughton, in honor of his son, Francis X. Naughton, who died of wounds sustained in the Argonne forest.

The parade Monday afternoon will be a military affair, it was decided at the meeting of those in charge last evening. George W. Rhoads, commander of the G. A. R. in the Pennsylvania division, appointed Francis H. Hoy, a veteran of the Spanish American War, as chief of staff. The first division will be composed of the veterans of previous wars, who will form an escort of honor for the veterans of the World War, in the second division. The Civil War veterans will ride in automobiles, each of which will be decorated with six American flags. The details regarding the formation and assembling of the parade were contained in the orders issued by the chief marshal to-day.

J. S. Lowenager, chairman of the high school council of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, has requested all merchants to close their stores Monday at noon, in order that proprietors and clerks may participate in the celebration.

To Develop Naval Reserve as Emergency Support For Navy

Washington, Sept. 24.—Plans for organizing the naval reserve force and developing its efficiency as an emergency reserve for the Navy were completed at a conference just concluded here between reserve officers representing all sections of the country and officers of the regular Navy.

The conference recommended legislation requiring the crews of all vessels flying the American flag to enroll in the naval reserve. Adequate appropriations to provide the training requisite to a high state of efficiency in the reserve also were advocated and plans completed for the part of the committee of the several naval districts. Arrangements likewise were made for assignment of training and cruising vessels by the Navy.

D'Annunzio Proclaims Italian Warships Units of "Fiuman Navy"

Pola, Monday, Sept. 22.—Four Italian warships, the battleship Dante Alighieri and the destroyers Mirabella, Nullo and Abba, are named as units of the "Fiuman navy" in a proclamation written by Captain Gabriele D'Annunzio and distributed in this city.

The proclamation praises the men of these ships for their loyalty to the Fiuman cause and extols them for their valorous acts. It is stated here it was because of the desertions of these four vessels from the regular Italian navy that Allied commanders were forced to withdraw from the harbor of Fiume, which was considered unsafe while the Dante Alighieri was anchored there and was loyal to the D'Annunzio cause.

Dispatches from Fiume soon after Captain Gabriele D'Annunzio's coup stated the Dante Alighieri was unable to leave port because her machinery had been damaged by the crew, but recently it has been reported she had departed, having on board Admiral Casanova who was placed under virtual arrest in Fiume when he landed and attempted to interfere with Captain D'Annunzio's control of the town. There is no word in available lists of the three destroyers named in the foregoing dispatch, and they probably are vessels which have been built since the beginning of the war.

American Warship Anchored at Fiume

Malta, Tuesday, Sept. 23.—Rear Admiral C. P. W. Hope, R. N., who arrived here to-day on board the British Cruiser Cardiff, bringing British troops from Fiume, reports that the United States armored cruiser Pittsburgh was among the war vessels of Fiume when the Cardiff left, while the cruiser Olympia had been ordered to proceed there.

When Gabriele D'Annunzio arrived with his expedition, Admiral Hope said, his men destroyed all the Allied troops of their arms, not even allowing men on patrol to carry their bayonets.
