The report, which was in response to a resolution by Senator Norris, Nebraska, made public confidential correspondence which showed that the commission told the "President the packers' profits were 'unreasonably high,' and that the food administration regulations should be changed to 'safeguard public interest.' The commission informed President Wilson, in a report dated June 28, 1918, that packers' war profits were at a rate 2 1/2 to three times earnings in prewar years.
