Men and Women Who Are Honored Today

THE following is the list of thirty-five hundred soldiers, sailors, marines, nurses and welfare workers of the Harrisburg district who were invited to attend the welcome home celebration activities yesterday and today. This list represents all the veterans living in Harrisburg and vicinity today, or who lived here when they went into the service. The committee has tried to make the list as complete as possible, and with that idea in mind, conducted a census of the city through the mail carriers, by which every house was reached. Through the newspapers the census was conducted among those former residents who after their war service moved elsewhere, but are entitled to the honors coming to Harrisburg's service men and women.

Such a list, of course, cannot be completed without missing a service man or woman here and there. If such an omission has been made, it is not because the committee did not expend every effort to make the census thoroughly complete, and the committee will welcome any information tending to make this list more thoroughly reliable than it is. Besides using it to invite every one of the men and women to the celebration today and yesterday, the committee will use it to compile a reliable account of Harrisburg's part in the World War, and will place it at the disposal of the State authorities for use in the pylons of the Memorial viaduct across the railroad at State street.

Where no residence is given the man or woman is now living in Harrisburg, and rank above private only is specially designated.
