

FORECASTS BREAK IN STEEL STRIKE

Decided Development Is Expected This Week by the "Iron Age"

New York, Sept. 29.—Many signs of weakening mark the iron and steel strike, and a decided break is looked for early next week by the "Iron Age."

Neither producers nor consumers are making any real effort to do business. Bookings have been unusually with the mills not seriously or at all affected and active furnaces have entered pig iron orders.

It follows that the business done is largely in those lines in which demand has for some time been relatively light.
