SAFETY BOOSTERS MEET TOMORROW

Philadelphia Division Committee to Discuss Plans For Big Drive

William Elmer, superintendent of the Philadelphia division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is working overtime in preparation for the big no-accident drive. He has called a meeting of the Division Safety Committee for to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. It will be held in the auditorium of the P. R. R. Y. M. C. A., Rely near Sixth streets. It is expected that 150 members will be present. Superintendent Elmer says:

"This meeting is in connection with the National Railroad Accident Prevention Drive to be held October 18 to 31 inclusive. This is an important meeting and it is imperative that you attend. Members receiving this notice will, if necessary, be relieved from duty to attend this meeting."

Posters in Evidence
By direction of L. W. Baldwin, Regional Director, large posters and prevention drive on steam railroads, from October 18 to 31, which will be carried on under direction and supervision of the Safety Section, will be placed on all public and employees' bulletin boards in this vicinity. This marks the start of the drive by which the United States Railroad Administration has planned to bring to the attention of all railroad employees, as well as the public at large, the possibilities of avoidable accidents when due thought and care are exercised.

"In a 'workshop' extending practically from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river on steam railroads, and Ohio rivers to the Great Lakes, as do the railroad lines in the Allegheny region, it is almost impossible to eliminate all accidents. Yet, since the establishment of the Safety Section of the United States Railroad Administration on February 19, 1918, wonderful results have been achieved by the Safety Committees of the individual railroads in reducing the number of accidents."

The agents were instructed, however, not to resume bookings beyond commitments already made.

There was no indication to-day when the embargo would be lifted completely but immediate action was not expected because of the congestion at the docks in Great Britain which has resulted from the strike of railway workers.

Visiting the Shops with Adele

IF you've never read Emerson's essay on the pleasures of shopping, it will give you an entirely different outlook on the matter. Gift-giving is an art, though many people fail to realize the fact and carelessly shove veritable "white elephants" onto their help-less friends. Perhaps they feel that any gift, no matter what it is, will be appropriate. But such is not the case. So, the next time you have a selection to make, go to Saltzger's Art and Antique Store, 223 North Second street, where you are sure to find gifts with a personality all their own. At present Mr. Saltzger is showing tall Colonial candlesticks of solid brass—just the proper thing to give the little bride-elect.

ONE of the country's most prominent lecturers and after-dinner speakers has always maintained a really good eating places. Now, we all know how untrue such an assertion is, and it was with considerable irritation that I last heard him make a remark of the sort. For a moment I was tempted to be angry, but quickly changed my mind and, instead, wagged that one meal at the Penn-Harris would completely quiet such accusations. He picked up the night in the city made a special point of eating his evening meal there. Just as was predicted, the following special $1.25 dinner completely altered his opinion: A relish, a choice of clam chowder or chicken broth with rice, a choice of broiled fresh mackerel, kernel of veal braised or cold assorted cuts; steamed hominy in cream and saute potatoes, chicory salad and a dessert. Who wouldn't enjoy such a tempting repast?

NEVER again let anyone tell you that clothes discussions are entirely confined to the feminine world. They most certainly are not! Some three days ago I heard seven men spend a whole hour in conversing along just such lines, and, may I add, their conversation was mostly about my new clothing department, no one needs to ask me where I buy my suits. It's me for their Hickey-Freeman or McFall suits, every time. The quality, style and workmanship can't be beat and they sell for from just $35 to $65.

Shop in the Morning Before the Crowd
Buying clothing of good quality is a serious business nowadays. It means a substantial investment: one which demands and should receive careful attention.
Never was the advantage of morning shopping more evident. To drop into my shop during the forenoon: to find a quiet, leisurely atmosphere: to feel that you have all the time in the world to make your selections: to know that the entire stock is available: to find a salesperson at the highest peak of efficiency: all these factors make shopping a real pleasure. And they mean that you'll select exactly the one right garment: that every dollar you spend will be wisely invested.
Try morning shopping just once—for an experiment. You'll become a convert. And by the way, why not call up in advance and make an appointment for the time of your favorite salesperson?
