WOMAN MAKES THRILLING ESCAPE

Hides Under Straw in an Old Cart Until She Reaches Safety

New York, Oct. 7.—The thrilling story of how Dr. Aldona Sluipus, five years ago a student in Philadelphia's Woman's Medical College, made her escape from the Bolshevists in a Lithuanian vegetable cart, hidden under the straw, has just come to the headquarters of the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund.

made her escape from the Bolshevists in a Lithuanian vegetable cart, hidden under the straw, has just come to the headquarters of the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund.

Dr. Sliupus, who came to the United States from Lithuania when she was very young, returned to her mother country shortly after she could write "doctor" before her name. As soon as the war broke out she plunged into helping her stricken countrymen — worked in canteens, did welfare work, anything she could—always with the particular object of helping the children. Such was her success with these little ones that a few months ago she was put at the head of all children's relief in Lithuania.

She is co-operating with representatives of the American Relief Administration European children's fund and had gone to a frontier town about 50 miles from Kovno to establish a soup kitchen for the Lithuanian refugees that come tumbling over the Russian border "going home." The victorious Bolsheviks came over the border, too, and cut her off from the rest of Lithuania.

Undaunted, she dressed herself in

The point was raised at an argument before the Public Service Commission in the rehearing application of the Pittsburgh Transportation Company that an auto bus company or any other public service company is not required to appear for the right to begin business after the commission has once passed upon the charter application and granted it. The commission some time ago issued an order restricting the company to certain routes upon company to certain routes upon complaint of the Pittsburgh Railways issued an order restricting the com-pany to certain routes upon com-plaint of the Pittsburgh Railways Company. A rehearing was asked. C. K. Robinson, for the transporta-tion company, raised the question of whether two applications were really necessary. Joseph R. there would be "dynamite" in many decisions.

Enlistment of fifteen overseas service men in the Pennsylvania State police force last week will be followed by enlistment of as many more within a short time, as there have been numerous applications from men who served in the army in France, including some machine gun battallon men, for admission to the force. Only men who have served in the army or navy are being enlisted now and some of the men who went from the State force into the army are now being taken back. Organization of the new troop will be finished at Lancaster in a short time, but it is improbable that it will be moved to Harrisburg until next summer, when the barracks will be built.

Changes in the new State Capitol office building plans are being made to provide for assembling the whole State Department of Health in the building. This department will have the greater part of three upper floors. It now has 25,000 square feet in the Capitol and has some offices in other buildings. When the new building is finished the Labor and Industry Bureaus will be grouped in one building. Bids for the new Capitol building will be asked this fall.

Doutrichs is the store for you---We sell on a reasonable, yet safe, margin—That's one thing about this "Live Store." We don't claim to give you "something for nothing," but you can always bank on getting greater values here.

We're a big concern in volume of business. We only have a one floor store, but through giving our customers square-dealing and selling only dependable merchandise we have managed to forge ahead at a faster growth than any clothing store throughout the land, and while we can modestly say we are doing more business than "all" the clothing stores in Harrisburg we are not content to rest on past laurels and we are going to try harder than ever before to cut down our profits to win a greater number of customers.

You see we don't mind working on a small margin of profit because we have such an enormous output that in the long run we come out on the safe side. We prefer to grow large and please more people rather than to make profits and stop expanding. Wherever there's a Doutrich store it's the leading men's store in that section of the country.
