Health Projects

"The Chamber of Commerce is carrying to a successful conclusion the suggestion of Colonel Edward Martin, Chief of the State Health Department that Harrisburg he made a ment, that Harrisburg be made a model city from the standpoint of health and sanitation. Through its ef health and sanitation. Through its er-forts, a health committee composed of representatives of 17 organizations is carrying on an aggressive cam-paign for better sanitation and other health requisites and in this campaign the committee is receiving the active co-operation of city and state offici-als. As one phase of the campaign, a Child Welfage Committee, composed ation by city and county commissioners, and the public consciousness has been awakened to the duty of perfect ing the sanitation of the city. A campaign committee has raised $4,000 to complete the work, and the city will have a healthful environment that will be the model of other Pennsylvania municipalities when the work of these health committees finally is finished.

"A committee of 125 citizens under leadership of William Jennings, arranged a great open-air reception and celebration in honor of the exservice men of the community. The event was highly successful, a memorial and welcome home service, parade, dinner, dances and many other projects having featured the program.

"The Chamber of Commerce contributed $500 toward the Kipona celebration.

"The Chamber of Commerce saved business men of Harrishus." "The Chamber of Commerce saved business men of Harrisburg thousands of dollars during the year, by investigating hundreds of financially unsound soliciting propositions, and refusing permits to the canvassers.

"The Chamber of Commerce launched a move which has as its goal the incorporation into the city limits of outlying boroughs, with the ultimate object of increasing the city's population to 125,000 persons.

"The Chamber took an aggressive stand against government ownership of the railroads, as making for inefficiency and stifling individual initiative. Congressmen from the state were urged to throw their influence against nationalization of the transportation systems.

"The Chamber co-operated with the city officials in steps to provide a municipal airplane field. A special committee, of which William Jennings, representing the Chamber of Commerce, is chairman, is now taking steps to secure the plot at the corner of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Maclay streets, belonging to the State Hospital for the Insane.

"The housing problem, probably the most important, is a very difficult one. Undoubtedly the agitation on the part of the Chamber was largely the cause of the large increase in building permits issued this year. The problem has not yet been solved for Harrisburg. The houses being built are neither sufficient in number or of the right kind to give us the answer. Much work remains for the new administration in this field.

for the new administration in this field.

"One of the important matters started during the year and one which was not included in the program of work, is that of a federation of charities. Everyone will agree that there have been too many campaigns for money, and we all know of a number now under consideration. The plan under discussion by our Public Affairs Committee, and which it is earnestly hoped will be solved before another year, is to have one big campaign, after ascertaining the annual needs of all Harrisburg institutions which find it necessary to go to the public for money. This would include institutions like the hospitals the Children's Industrial Home, Sylvan Heights Orphanage, Y. M. C. A.Y. W. C. A., Nursery Home, Rescue Missions, Red Cross, Salvation Army, and many others. The scheme is much like the war chest idea in use at a number of places during the war, and the advantages are so self-evident that it is not necessary to take the time to point them out.

is not necessary point them out. is not necessary to take the time to point them out.

"One matter of great satisfaction to your Board has been the wonderful gain in members this year. On January 1st there were 731 members, and to-day we have 974, a gain of 243, or 33 per cent. This gain, from which has been deducted the normal losses due to death, removal from the city and resignation, is particluarly gratifying in view of the fact that so many applications came voluntarily and shows that an increasingly large number of people regard it an honor and a distinction to belong to the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce and to participate in the work the Chamber is doing for the welfare of the community."

"A committee on Americanization is co-operating with Mr. Zorger in securing an accurate census of the number of foreign-born employes of the manufacturing establishments throughout the city, in order that they can be reached for Americanization purposes.

"Consideration was given to this subject, and an increased appropriation will be urged when the consideration of the subject shows the immediate necessity for more funds. "A community music committee from the Chamber after closing a busy summer season replete with community music, now is turning its attention to the winter work. During the summer two dozen band concerts and community singing concerts supplied the need for community music in Harrisburg. Concerts were rendered weekly at Reservoir Park, and twice monthly at Fourth and Senecastreets. All of these band concerts twere featured by community singing, arranged through collaboration with the War Camp Community Service. Six band concerts concluded the summer program on Labor Day. The committee was active in securing the passage of a bill in the Legislature legalizing the appropriation of $700, for free concerts. "The industrial committee has investigated the feasibility of the construction of a belt line railroad enticling the city between Middletown and Rockville, and a decision on this question can be expected within a reasonable time.
