

Finds Evidence of Lost Island

Honolulu, T. H., Oct. 10.—Search for evidence supporting the theory of a lost Pacific continent is being prosecuted in the Hawaiian Islands, the South Seas and along the west coast of South America. Professor Douglas R. Campbell of the botany department of Stanford University thinks that in certain specimens of ferns found on the island of Hawaii he has established the fact that at some period there was land connection between the Hawaiian group and the islands to the south and west through to the Malay peninsula. Professor T. A. Jaggar, Jr., in charge of the Federal observatory at Kilauea volcano, grades with Professor Campbell's theory, asserting that there are geological indications that the islands of the Pacific were once connected.

Seeking data in support of Professor Campbell's theory, Professor W. A. Bryan of the College of Hawaii is now touring the west coast of South America and the South Sea Islands.

Invents Process to Solder Aluminum

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 10.—A discovery which is expected to save housewives great expense has just been made by a Berne engineer, Charles Bingell, who has invented a process for soldering aluminum. Professor Schule, of the Federal Institute of Berne, in a test made a few days ago, soldered two bars of aluminum. They snapped under the weight of 800 pounds but the soldering successfully resisted pressure. Heretofore, aluminum had defied welding, the professor said.
