mander William McLean, his personal physician, and several others who have been members of the Colonel's party at Hotel Crillon.

The Colonel himself would make no statement regarding his health texcept to say that he was "much better," but it was noticed that friends helped him down the gangplank; when he came ashore. Passengers said that he rarely left his.state room the during the trip from Brest, and that several times while at sea his personal physician called in Captain E. J. Lee, the ship's surgeon, for consultation. Information given out following these consultations stated that Colonel House was suffering from a "slight attack of grip."

While newspaper men who were admitted to the ship's saloon for a short interview with the Colonel agreed that he seemed to be "a very sick man," several close friends of the diplomat expressed delight at finding him "looking so well."

have made good, and the 100 now on duty will be retained. They must be of good education, possessing tact, kindliness and a sympathetic nature, willing to work seven hours a day for $10 a week and be ready at all times for duty.

The force was recruited from the patrol workers of the National Union of Women Workers employed by the commissioner in 1916 to aid in the protection of the city. They did excellent work, but last November it was felt that the pressing need for them had passed, and they were disbanded.

The cessation of hostilities, how-banded.

The cessation of hostilities, however, brought thousands of young officers from the fighting front to London, and the fear that an orgle of dissipation might follow the rigors of life in the trenches induced the police to retain 100 picked women for duty in the night life sections.
