into existence almost immediately upon the publication in Paris of the ratification of the Treaty Great Britain. France, Italy and Germany which will put it into force.

Although the United States can not parteipate in the initial stages of the League's work, it is understood that the decision has been reached to have President Wilson issue a call for the first meeting of the council of the League within the 15-day period provided in the Treaty for the appointment by the council of three members of the council of the reambers of the council of the sare abasin.

Article five of the Covenant provides that decisions of the council "shall require the agreement of all of the members of the League represented at the meeting," and it is held that this does not specifically require the attendance of an American member to legalize such decisions.

No less than 15 commissions created by the Peace Treaty appear to require American participation and certain plebiscites confirming title to various disputed territories also are to be conducted under a joint international control. The present view of the officials here, however, is that representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy and possibly Japan, whose ratification of the Treaty is expected daily, will function in these matters without any challenge of the legality of the proceedings on account of the absence of the American representatives.
