WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION

Twenty Cents

November 1919

And be sure to read—

Is there a perfect husband in your town?

There are two in Brooklyn—and only one in the whole State of New York! Their own wives say so! The COMPANION asked its readers for letters on the subject "My Husband's Worst Fault and What I Did to Help Him Correct It"—and you should read the replies! A flood of them! And such a variety of "worst" faults! You'd never believe it—unless you have a husband of your own. Untidy Husbands, Profane Husbands, Finicky-about-food Husbands! Read them—and here's a tip: put a big blue pencil mark around the one—and show it to him!

Are you going to vote as your men-folks do?

The COMPANION opens the woman's political forum! Chairman of the Republican Women's Committee on one side and of the Democratic party on the other side. It's the best political reading for women (and men, too) you have ever run across. Interesting reasons why you should join each party, and surely you will join—one or the other. Think of the power of your 20,000,000 votes!

You either fix your hair—or your hair fixes you

Do you know that you can make your nose shorter or longer—your face thinner or rounder—your figure heavier or more slender—just by the way you fix your hair? Miss Gould knows, and tells you just how to do it—to make your hair "Your Crowning Glory."

And a prince winked at her!

She talked intimately with the queen. She saw royal princesses stand for hours at a court ball while she sat. A prince violated the royal custom to wink at her. The wife of an American foreign minister saw the amusing, human side of life in the most formal court in Europe. You will enjoy immensely what she tells you.

After all—has anyone ever really heard from the dead?

Have such clear-headed men as Tennyson and Gladstone been deceived? What is there, anyway, to the idea? You, yourself, wonder sometimes. Margaret Deland, America's greatest woman writer, has made exhaustive researches—and discusses the subject in her sane, thoughtful, interesting manner.

This is only a very little of the wealth of Good Stories, Special Features, Useful Articles, Fashions, Entertainment, Regular Departments and Stunning Illustrations in the big November COMPANION.
