Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 20.—Slip-ping quietly out of town, Guile W. Hank Oryin, who lives close to ping quietly out of town, Guile W. Groff's woods, a half dozen miles Lefever and Miss M. Genevieve from the Perry county seat in his Spangler were married in Harris-bachelor quarters, came to town on burg. The romance began six years bachelor quarters, came to town on Saturday and told a tale of how a fisherman captured a three-pound bass in Buffalo creek without rod or line. The fisherman, Orvin says, was seated on the bank watching his line. All at once there was a commotion in the water. The angler thought a large fish had swallowed hook and bait and prepared for a struggle.

As he was getting ready to haul in his prize he saw a bass jump cut of the water and into his basket which was on the bank. He lost no time in securing the fish which was a beauty. It had pursued an active minnow to the water's edge. Its momentum was so great that when it made a final grab for the minnow it landed on the bank close

Kauffman, of Mifflin, were the attendants.

Both bride and groom were school teachers in Adams county, Mr. Lefever, whose home is at Mechanics-burg, being the head of the science department in the Gettysburg high school, and Miss Spangler, who lives about a mile from town, a teacher in the rural schools since her graduation from Shippensburg. Following the ceremony they left for a wedding trip to Baltimore and Old Point Comfort, Va., after which they will reside here.
