

"Monsieur de Paris" Idle but Gets Raise

Paris — There is a man in France who seemed to have been forgotten during the war. Not until peace returned did people trouble much about him or how he lives in these days of high cost. His name is Deblier. He is the man who does not cut down the cost of living, but cuts down living itself. The instrument he uses is the guillotine. He gets a bonus for every criminal head he cuts off, but his income during the war must have been very small, for bullets were the usual means employed for rigging society of dangerous outlaws, because the country was under martial law. Since the armistice Deblier, who is popularly known as "Monsieur de Paris," has worked only one day or rather, only one morning. His situation has been brought to the notice of the authorities, who have allowed him $1,200 extra a year to meet the high cost of living. But there are Frenchmen who would prefer to see Deblier receive, not an indemnity, but bonuses for cutting off the heads of overambitious merchants who charge too much for their wares.

Peasants' Land Hunger Disturbs Rome Cabinet

Rome — Italy's land question is rapidly becoming the most urgent national problem. As the peasants return from the army they show decided energy in claiming parts of large private estates near their homes, which are either uncultivated or badly cultivated. In many parts of the county large bodies of peasants, in which ex-soldiers predominate, are seizing land they formerly held on a somewhat burdensome lease.
