CORNELL SHOWS COMEBACK FORM

Coaches Look For More Satisfactory Results in Future Games

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Another famous Cornell star of other days has come to Ithaca to assist in developing a powerful football team. He is John O'Hearn, well known in the football world as "Jack," captain of the 1914 team and one of the greatest ends ever developed at Ithaca. O'Hearn is a close student of the game and was considered one of the brainiest football players that ever wore the "C."

With O'Hearn and Jimmie Munns captain of the fighting 1913 team reinforcing the regular coaching staff, composed of Speedy Rush, Ray Van Orman, and Willard Cool, the Cornell squad is experiencing the most intensive practice of the year and gratifying development both in defensive and offensive play is the result.

Reo Motor Car Co. Speeds Up Production

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 25.—Probably the largest production of any single truck model anywhere was attained at the Reo plant Wednesday when over a hundred Speed Wagons came off the assembly chain in the course of a nine-hour working day.

While this production was above the average for this model it was not the result of a sudden spurt but rather of a continuous and sustained effort to meet the remarkable country-wide demand for this successful vehicle. Facilities have been increased steadily, yet they have failed to keep pace with the demand.

Neither has the shortage of railroad cars checked the development of the truck business. Where freight cars were not available dealers have driven trucks over the roads, radiating out from Lansing in all directions. Coupled with the great demand urging them on to driveaway trucks, the Speed Wagons, while a real truck, is both fast and easy riding and handles as easily as a touring car. The same quality which makes it a favorite for long distance passenger and freight hauling make possible long distance driveaways.

Flets of Speed Wagons have been going over the road to points at such distance as Shreveport, La., Birmingham, Ala., Atlanta, Ga., Toronto, Ont., Hartford, Conn., Boston and Philadelphia. Truck driveaways make good material into the finished product. But results are coming now and if the developments of the past few days mean anything to the Reo plant, the future will not be the only man to star for the Cornellians.

Volleyball Game Tonight, First in Title Schedule; Special Dance Program

An interesting volleyball game is promised to-night when Hanover meets Zemo Patrol. This is the first of a series of games between these teams for championship honors. The game and dance is open to the public. A nominal admission is charged. Indications point to a special dance program in honor of the big crowd of rooters coming from York and Hanover.

The Wonderful Stories of OZ by L. Frank Baum Purple, Green and Gold

When Billina placed her claw upon the purple footstool in the Nome King's palace, and said the magic word, "Ev," the footstool vanished and a lovely woman, tall and slender and most beautifully robed, stood before her. And the woman's eyes were round with astonishment for a moment, for she could not remember her transformation, nor imagine what had restored her to life.

THE QUEEN OF EV THANKS BILLINA

"Good morning, Ma'am," said Billina, in her sharp voice. "You're looking quite well, considering your age." "Who speaks?" demanded the Queen of Ev, drawing herself up proudly. "Why, my name's Bill, by rights," answered the hen, who was now perched upon the back of a chair, "although Dorothy has put scallops on it and made it Billina. But the name doesn't matter. I've saved you from the Nome King, and you are a slave no longer."

"Then I thank you for the graceful courtesy," said the Queen, with a smile. "But, my children—tell me, I beg of you—where are my children?" and she clasped her hands in anxious entreaty. "Don't worry," advised Billina, pecking a tiny bug that was crawling over the chair back. "Just at present they are out of mischief and perfectly safe, for they can't even wiggle."

"What mean you, O kindly stranger?" asked the Queen, striving to repress her anxiety. "They're enchanted," said Billina, "just as you have been—all, that is, except the little fellow Dorothy picked out. And the chances are that they have been good boys and girls for some time, because they couldn't help it."

"Oh, my poor darlings!" cried the Queen, with a sob of anguish. "Not at all," returned the hen. "Don't let their condition make you unhappy, ma'am, because I'll soon have them crowding round to bother you as naturally as ever. Come with me, if you please, and I'll show you how pretty they look."

She flew down from her perch and walked into the next room the Queen following. As she passed a small green grasshopper caught her eye, and instantly Billina pounced upon it and snapped it up in her sharp beak. "For grasshoppers are my favorite food with hens, and they usually must be caught quickly, before they can be away. It might easily have been an emerald one. But Billina found been a green grasshopper instead of an emerald one. But Billina found the grasshopper hard and lifeless, and suspecting it was not good to eat she quickly dropped it instead of letting it slide down her throat."

"I might have known better," she muttered to herself, "for where there is no grass there can be no there is no grasshoppers. This is probably one of the King's transformations." A moment later she approached, and one of the purple ornaments and while the Queen watched her curiously the hen broke the Nome King's enchantment and a sweet-faced girl, whose golden hair fell in a cloud over her shoulders, stood beside her.

"Evanna!" cried the Queen, "my own Evanna!" and she clasped the girl to her bosom and covered her face with kisses. "That's all right," said Billina, contentedly. "Am I a good guesser, Mr. Nome King? Well, I guess!" Then she disenchanted another girl, whom the Queen addressed as Evrose, and afterwards a boy named Evardo, who was older than his brother Evring. Indeed, the yellow hen kept the good Queen exclaiming and embracing for some time, until five Princesses and four Princes, all looking very much alike except all for the difference in size, stood in a row beside their happy mother.

"Thank you," replied Tiktok. "Then," said Billina, in her brisk little voice, "let us all go back to the Nome King, and see what he has to say for himself." So they started for the entrance, Ozma going first, with the Queen and her train of little Princes and Princesses following. Then came Tiktok, and the Scarecrow with Billina perched upon his straw-stuffed shoulder. The twenty-seven officers and the private brought up the rear.

After Billina had entered the palace Dorothy and Evring sat down to wait the success or failure of her mission, and the Nome King occupied his throne and smoked his long pipe for a while in a cheerful and contented mood. Then the bell above the throne, which sounded whenever an enchantment was broken, began to ring, and the King gave a start of annoyance and exclaimed, "Rocketty-ricketts!"

When the bell rang a second time the King shouted angrily, "Smudge and blazes!" and a third time he screamed in a fury, "Hippikalic!" which must be a dreadful word because we don't know what it means. After that the bell went on ringing time after time; but the King was now so violently enraged that he could not utter a word, but hopped out of his throne and all around the room in a mad frenzy, so that he reminded Dorothy of a jumping-jack.

The girl was, for her part, filled with joy at every peal of the bell, for it announced the fact that Billina had transformed one more ornament into a living person. Dorothy was also amazed at Billina's success, for she could not imagine how the yellow hen was able to guess correctly from all the bewildering number of articles clustered in the rooms of the palace. But after she had counted ten, and the bell continued to ring, she knew that not only the royal family of Ev, but Ozma and her followers also, were being restored to their natural forms, and she was so happy that she danced and sang and gave the shrill whistle that summoned his warriors.

Editor's Note—Next week we shall learn how the Scarecrow outwitted the wicked Nome King, when he sought to make Dorothy and Ozma and all their party his prisoners, and of how they thus defeated the King's terrible armies.
