In speaking of the needs for a civic center Mr. Brunner said: "The civic center is an example of wise control. It represents law and order. Here the streets meet and resolve themselves into regular forms; the buildings stop swearing at each other, cease their struggle for prominence and their endeavors to overtop each other; they take their places in the civic ranks like true soldiers obedient to authority.

The officers to serve Section 8B-6 during the present semester have been elected. They are: President, Abram Michlovitz; vice-president, Anna Reneker; secretary, Dorothy Lebo; assistant secretary, Charles Skinner; treasurer, Charles Roney; class cantain for how. The boys and girls of Section 7B-8 took a hike out through Reservoir Park Tuesday evening. When they reached a good camping ground beyond the park they built a nice bonfire, roasted apples, potatoes and toasted marshmallows. The outing, campfire and refreshments were thoroughly enjoyed by all. The following members participated in the hike; Elmira Weaver, Luella Anderson, Anna McBride, Esther Gilbert, Miriam Patterson, Beatrice Ellenberger, Kathryn Snyder, Martha Douglas, Emily Shearer, Grace Shultz, Elizabeth Peters, Kathryn Hangaen, Alice Hart, Della McNally, Sara Comp, Sara Cassell, Dorothy Cuddy, Thomas Sheetz, Ray Garverich, Marlin Colestock, Thomas Harvey, Marlin Hoover, John Blottenberg and Raymond Hammaker. The party was chaperoned by Miss Sue Sparrow.

Section 9B-5 is one of the leading sections in the matter of school banking. This section averaged civic ranks like true soldiers obedient to authority.

"In designing the municipal center we must plan for to-day and prepare for to-morrow. With an eye to the future we must decide just how much we can do now, just how much we can pay now. Sufficient unto the day are the taxes thereof. But let us build well, of enduring materials, plan deliberately, abandon village methods and above all have faith in our ideals.

ATTACKS WILSON

Rome, Tuesday, Oct. 29.—The Tribuna makes another attack on President Wilson and the American government in connection with an article on Italian claims. The newspaper complains that the United States lavishly poured men, arms and money into Europe, but that Italy got none of these. Section 9B-5 is one of the leading sections in the matter of school banking. This section averaged ninety-four and three-fourths per cent. membership in the school system and yesterday the other members pledged themselves to start the saving habit next week. The section is working hard to become the first one hundred per cent thrift section.

Yesterday was a real election day for Section 9B-5. During the homeroom activities the section carried an election for home room officers and school traffic squad. In the latter case they voted for thirty-two officers and incidentally the class election officers learned something of the task that falls to the lot of regular election officers. The home room officers-elect are: President, Truman Thompson; vice-president, Truman Thompson; vice-president, Truman Thompson; secretary, Niles Sowers; class captain for boys, Russell Free; lieutenant for boys, Karl Barth; class captain for girls, Mary Collins; lieutenant for girls, Mann Davis; parliamentary critic, Nathan Selickson; assistant parliamentary critic, George Hopkins; watch your speech critic, Theodore Selig; assistant watch your speech critic, Mildred Kline; reporter to Edison Guard, Laurence Hess.

When Palestrina's great work, the whole of Italy welcomed it with a burst of passionate applause," writes

John Addington Symonds in his

been created. A new and lovely form of art had arisen like a star."

In George Moore's musical novel, "Evelyn Innes," whole pages are devoted to Palestrina. After Evelyn's father had successfully organized a choir in London to sing the old church music Evelyn remarked:
"Father always said that Palestrina would draw all London, if properly given." Then follows a description of the singing of the Palestrina music; "The Missa Brevis is one of the most exquisite of the master's minor works. It is written in four voices, and with the largest choir st his command. M. Largest choir st his command.

is one of the most exquisite of the master's minor works. It is written in four voices, and with the largest choir at his command, Mr. Innes was able to put eight to ten voices on a part; and hearing voices darting, voices soaring, voices floating, weaving an audible embroidery, Evelyn felt the vanity of accompaniment instruments. Upon the ancient chant the new harmonies blossomed like roses on an old garden stem, and when on the ninth bar of the Kyrie the tenors soft separated from the sustained chords of the other parts, the effect was as of magic. She had heard it sung by gray haired men in the papal choir in Rome, soprano voices of a rarer and more radiant timber than any woman's sexful voice—subtle, and, in some complex way, hadly of the and more radiant timber than any woman's sexful voice—subtle, and, in some complex way, hardly of the earth at all—voices in which no accent of sex transpired, abstract voices aloof from any stress of passion, undistressed by any longing. They were not human voices, and hearing them, Evelyn had imagined angels bearing tall lilies in their hands, standing on wan heights of celestial landscape, singing their clear silver music."

Worked as a Huckster

While much of the life of Giovanni Plerluigi Palestrina is veiled with the mist of fable, such facts as are known read like a romance. He was born in the small town of Palestrina, southeast of Rome, and it was from that little town that he derived his name. In the year 1541, while he was a boy of about 14, he left his birthplace and went to the Eternal City. Tradition has it that he was received into the Choir of Santa Maria Maggiore by Maestro Pittoni, who heard him singing in the streets. Another story is that he was a huckster, calling out his wares and attention was attracted to his voice. At any rate, it is certain that October 28, 1544, at the age of the prospective short-age of coal, it is planned to combine several schools, reduce the courses and hours of study to 18 a week. This has a roused a protest.

In 1554 he had made enough progress in composition to dedicate a volume of masses to Pope Julius III and the next year he was appointed as one of the pontifical singers in the Sistine Chapel. This was in violation of all rules for he was a layman and married, and it is also said that he was not a good singer after he reached the years of maturity. After the death of Julius, and when Paul IV came to the papal throne, he promptly dismissed Palestrina from the choir, and did not allow him the pension of six gold scudiabout $6-\text{a}$ month.

The composer was quite prostrated by worry over his poverty. As a matter of fact he lived and died a poor man. In the dedications to some of his great works he often remarks with touching pathos how difficult it was to pursue his work in the midst of domestic anxiety. In October, 1555, he became chapel master for ten years at the still small and inadequate salary of sixteen scudi a month.

It was during this incumbency that the Council of Trent had condemned church music because of its laxity, artificiality and adoption of Sarah E. Colgate, aged 2, whose name is to be changed to Naomi Elizabeth

Refutes Stories That Jenkins Gave Himself Up to Band of Bandits

By Associated Press

Mexico City, Wednesday, Oct. 29.

—Published intimations that the abductions of William C. Jenkins, American consular agent at Puebla, presented phases indicative of connivance by Jenkins and certain of his associates with the bandits are refuted in a story published by Excelsior. The newspaper's story is the result of an investigation by its special representative in Puebla.

The Excelsior says the consular agent was really kidnaped and that Cordova, leader of the bandits, signed a receipt of 300,000 pesos, although it says it is not known how much of this amount has been paid or who paid it.

The arrest of Jenkins' attorney, who has been released on bail, is believed to have been brought about by the local courts wanting to assure testimony to aid in clearing up more or less hazy charges.

Use Schools to Provide Barracks For Soldiers

Berlin, Oct. 30.— Some of the public schools of the city have been unable to admit pupils this autumn because the buildings were occupied by Home Defense troops which camped in them during the vacation period. Authorities of the schools have protested to the Prussian Minister of Education and to Defense Minister of Education and to Defense Minister Noske, pointing out that hundreds of moving picture theaters, concert halis and hotels have remained undisturbed by troops.

To provide barracks for these soldiers, the government is confiscating the quarters of numerous war societies.

Because of the prospective shortage of coal, it is planned to combine several schools, reduce the courses and hours of study to 18 a week. This has aroused a protest.

Although no official confirmation of the rumor has been received the Italian delegation generally feels that the information is correct and that the delegates are showing great disappointment. While the heads of the Italian mission maintain their courteous, diplomatic manner, lesser members of the delegation are outspoken saying the decision would prolong indefinitely the perplexities and anxieties now facing the Italian Government.
