Plans for the park were drawn by Karl B. Lohmann, city planner of the Bureau of Municipalities with the approval of Secretary of Internal

At the outset the government works had very few skilled workmen, and every step it took was threatened with failure; more than once the project was c.c. the point of being abandoned. There did not exist a body of mechanics from whom recruits could be drawn. It was necessary to train the men, or it would be more correct to say that the men had to train themselves as best they could. Even more difficult than the problem of mere skill was that of developing pride of mechanical achievement. The government works now employ about fifteen thousand workers showing a high degree of efficiency.

Iron and Steel Works, also in China, is shipped each year to the Japanese government steel works in discharge of financial obligations to the latter. The Tayeh mine on the Yangtse River belongs to the Hantyen-Ping Iron Works, one of the largest in the Far East, located at Hanyang, near Hankow. It was started some years ago as a Chinese government concern, but as the result of numerous difficulties it fell into financial dependence on Japanese interests, which have advanced large sums to it, the obligations now standing at about 37½ million dollars. Large extensions which are now under way will shortly make it possible for Japan annually to secure one hundred and thirty thousand tons of pig iron and one-half million tons of high percentage ore from this source.

Altogether they are estimated at about 40 million tons. When it is considered that the iron industry of the United States would exhaust Japan's total known deposits of ore within a single year, it is evident that the country must depend more and more upon ores from other sources.
