One point which never fails to impress me about Miss Golden is her unerring instinct for selecting the right model for the right person. And really this is a factor of considerable importance in a milliner's equipment.

I suspect there are two reasons for Miss Golden's intense interest in this phase of her work. One is her genuine desire to please her patrons and the other is her desire to see her craftmanship displayed to its best advantage. Miss Golden's attitude toward her work is that of the true artist. And of course an artist is quite as interested in the setting of his achievements as he is in the actual work itself.

INTERESTING PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

FRIDAY EVENING,

The marriage of Miss Sarah Schindler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schindler, of this city, to Owen Lewis, of Enhaut, was solemnized in St. Mary's Catholic Church Thursday morning, October 30, with the Rev. Father Stupf officiating.

The bride, who wore a blue traveling costume with hat to harmonize, carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Margaret Scott, the bride's cousin, as maid of honor, wore a blue street suit and carried pink roses. Jack Bremman was best man and Herman Wieger, of Steelton, played the wedding marches. Mr. Lewis is a son of Mrs. Grant Miller, of Enhaut, and an employe of the Bethlehem Steel Company, of Steelton. The newly-weds will be at home to their friends after November 5 at 527 Woodbing street. Steelton. The newly-weds will be at home to their friends after No-vember 5 at 527 Woodbine street.

MARRY IN NEW YORK
Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Farriday, of 521 South Fifteenth street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Geneva Farriday, to Gene Otto, of Lancaster, Monday, October 27, in St. Stephen's Catholic Church,

I called upon a friend several days ago and was ushered into the room just in time to catch the close of a one-sided conversation, over the telephone. "That was Mrs. Brown," exclaimed my hostess, as she hung up the receiver, "just calling to ask me where I got my new coat. She saw it at the matiree yesterday." Now I had seen it, too, and was wondering the very same thing. I had noticed its well-tailored lines, its wonderful fabric, and its stunning fur collar, remarking mentally that it probably had cost a small fortune. Imagine my amazement when I learned that Louis, the Ladies' Tailor, had made it for a sum so reasonable as to be absolutely surprising in these days of high prices. Now, isn't that just like Louis?

Is there anything more effective than a gleaming bit of brass against the dull darkness of unpolished mahogany? In one charming Southern home which I now recall an old Russian samovar and brass Colonial candles combine with rare antique Mahogany to make a room over which interior decorators sigh in despair. Perhaps it is the candles, perhaps it is the Samovar—I do not know—but somehow it has a certain charm unmistakable in its appeal. Be that as it may, Mr. Saltzgiver has similar articles of brass at his Art and Antique Store, 223 North Second street, as well as a Russian Coffee Pot well worth while possessing.
