

HOVERTER WILL BE CITY'S NEXT MAYOR

Harrisburg if our public affairs are properly handled and if we take full advantage of the opportunities the war has given us. I look forward to the time when Harrisburg will be the third city of the State in population, just as it now is from an industrial and a transportation standpoint. But this will not just happen. It will not come about unless we, the people of the city, do our part. We must not only endeavor to procure new industries for Harrisburg, but we must make here a city that will appeal to the man looking for an industrial home. We must go on as we have been going, making this an attractive place in which to live as well as to do business. And in this respect I have noted, in getting around the city during the past month or two, that while our builders have done splendidly this year in the construction of additional houses under difficult conditions, there is still a great housing shortage. I would say that, as mayor, any movement designed to erect a large number of houses to be rented or sold at reasonable cost will have my hearty support. I believe that decent, good-looking homes at reasonable rentals constitute the greatest need of Harrisburg at this moment."

Interested in City
Alderman Hovertor is deeply interested in everything pertaining to the growth of the city. "No man could go through an experience in Select Council, as I did, during the time when the first great public improvement campaign was in full swing," he said to-day, "without imbibing some of the splendid spirit that our lawmaking bodies and the citizenship in general showed at that time, and I am free to say that I have lost none of my enthusiasm for Harrisburg since. During all my forty years of residence in the city I have been interested in its growth and development, but I am perfectly aware that it requires more than enthusiasm to make the city government move forward and at the same time keep it within the bounds of reasonable revenues. I have no foolish theories to work out, but I have very definite ideas as to what the mayor of a city like this should do. I believe he ought to be a leader in every worthy plan for the advancement and betterment of Harrisburg, but I also think that he ought not to give his endorsement to any plan without first considering the cost and finding if it comes within the ability of the taxpayer to meet. Government of all kinds, even with the best intentions in the world, has come to be very costly during the war, and the whole country must, whether we want to or not, get down to real business again if we are not to run hopelessly into debt. This is no criticism of anybody, nor is the view solely mine. Every man with whom I have talked feels the same way. Economy, after the extravagance of the war, must be the watchword of the hour. We must spend wherever it is necessary to spend, but we must also count the cost and save for the city every cent that it is possible to save.

Promises a Clean Business Administration

GEORGE A. HOVERTOR

"To that end I propose to conduct my own police hearings. My experience as alderman of the Ninth wards fits me, I think, very well for that work, and I shall not shirk it. I believe the people ought to have the six or seven thousand dollars I can save for them in that way and I mean that they shall have it."
Alderman Hovertor has been getting about the city quietly and has met thousands of voters. Everywhere he has been met in the most kindly way. His progressive attitude and his ideas of economy in administration of public affairs have appealed mightily to the rank and file and, as he says, the indications are that he will have a sweeping majority next Tuesday.

trans-Siberian lines from Vladivostok to the Ural mountains and return. Word of Gerdes' safety has just been received in this city.
"The officer received orders June 2 to leave the next day for the Ural mountains for a trip supposedly of two months. The trip actually took nearer four months, and in point of time and distance was the longest made by an American officer in the expeditionary forces in Siberia."
Pays Tribute to Kolchak
"Gerdes was in Ekaterinburg during its evacuation by the forces fighting the Reds and it was at this time that the last little cluster of Americans was supposed to have been taken prisoner."
"I took three weeks for the Yanks to make their way to Omsk, where they were just in time to countermand cables of their capture from Vladivostok. Gerdes familiarized himself with the making of the new anti-Red army, and in letters pays high tribute to the work of Admiral Kolchak in joining the army, and in fact the whole country, from turning to the side of the Bolsheviks."
Not Nice to Reporters
"Gerdes, who is awaiting his sailing date to return to this city, rapped stories sent from Siberia by war reporters for eastern papers. These men have written their accounts from chairs in Vladivostok, he said, and their stories are not accurate reflections of conditions in interior Siberia."

A. F. OF L. WILL SUPPORT MINERS

tion of anthracite mines and the substitution of wood, actual suffering on the part of the public in the event of sudden weather change, the strike is not believed likely.
Dr. H. A. Garfield said that all questions contemplated that all questions of allocating coal would be left to the Director General in settlement. The former, as fuel administrator, will give his authority to Mr. Hines' orders, but will not remain in Washington to undertake supervision of the work.
Dr. Garfield said that the point had not yet been reached necessitating curtailment of industries, but if it is necessary eventually the curtailment list prepared by the fuel administration for the War Industries Board during the war probably would be used. The war industries list of course, he explained, would not get the treatment they did during the war, and might be cut off altogether.
Price control over anthracite, the administrator emphasized, would not be exercised at this time. He made the statement regarding anthracite to correct a previous assertion that the control would cover prices of both soft and hard coal.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain. How To Treat.
Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, nervousness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. As some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated by indigestion, and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well. Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisulphate of Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pocket. Bisulphate of Magnesia powder or tablet form—never liquid (or milk) is harmless to the stomach, few people know of its most effective form of magnesium for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who were troubled with no more fear of indigestion.

fraternity, and enlisted in the United States Army, Chicago campus, attending the ordnance school; and winning his second lieutenant's commission in Camp Meade. He was made first lieutenant in Siberia. George Shaffer a former Harrisburg, now a writer on the Chicago Tribune, has the following to say about Lieutenant Gerdes.
On Captive List
"After being on the list of the American Expeditionary forces in Siberia for three weeks as a captive of the Bolsheviks, along with the American vice-consul at Ekaterinburg, an American Red Cross officer, and 10 doughboys, First Lieutenant Paul Williams Gerdes, former University of Chicago basketball and baseball player, showed up at Omsk on a 9,000-mile mission of inspection along the
