Early Religious and Home Training Experiences of a Big Businessman

TUESDAY EVENING.

(By Alba B. Johnson, President State Chamber of Commerce, in the New Era Magazine).

My father was a bresbyterian elder. He brought his Children to conform to the same standards of Subbath observance that had prevailed in his father's family, living in the state of Maine during the first half of the last ecuting. We never questioned whether we liked it, not whether we wanted to go to church. Had the choice been left to us there would certainly have been less regularity in our attendance. There were two Tunday preaching services and Sabbath cohool, and there was the regular prayer meeting on Wednesday evenings, all of which were attended by the whole family. There was also a young peoples meeting on Friday evenings. The Mednesday prayer meeting was conducted by the minister with addresses and prayers by the elders and deacous. Participation in the prayer meeting was regarded as one of the duties of church membership. The Friday meeting was conducted wholly by the younger people, and constituted in a close a training ochool for participation in the duties expeopled from Them later in the various church activities.

One of the young people led, and the singing was from Moody and Sankey's song-book. The service was informal. Some would call for a cong, some would repeat verses of dripture, and some would attempt brief addresses or prayers after the manner of their elders. I Some of the boys would see some of the girls home after the meetings - it was an excuse to get together. For both young and old the Church was the social centre and the chief interest outside of business and home.

I suppose there comes into every boys life a period of rebellion against religious beliefs and practices. It was so in my case, and I deeply grieved my parents by refusing longer to observe the required attendance upon religious service. I declared my independence. I found new friends who had other ways of spending their Sundays and of finding their pleasures. Them I married. In oreating a new home I felt an inhense desire that its basis should be that of christian worship. When that home was blessed with children it became a vital question which could not be ignored, whatcost of a home atmosphere there would be; what its attitude towards the worthip of God and obedience to the precepts of Jeans Christ. John W. Couverse orce said to me that a man much be diligent in observing the requirements of his busi-nees, first as a matter of discipline, and later as one of example to others. I had passed through, the period of religious discipline; I now felt the obligation of example.

The time must come to every thinking individual when he realizes that he must set - his course for the voyage of life. What is to be his fundamental attitude toward the things of the spirit and of God? What sort of a man does he wish to be himself, and what cost of men and women does he wish his children to develop into? He must decide for himself whether the world would be a better place for all its people to live in were the religion of Jean Christ to be wholly blotted out and non-existent, or, ! were the principles of Christianity to pressil in the hearts and lives and practices of all men-Avoiding all compromise, he must think the thing out to its ultimete conclusion. Having reached his conclusion, if he is honest with himself, he must strive to bring about the complete recognition and observance of those principles which commend themselves to him. This does not mean acquiescence, it means action, action which can be effective only by union with others holding the same views and thising for the same end, which is the triumph of the exist of Christ throughout the world. The union of those inspired by their purpose is the Church, and none can work effectively for the aims and purposes for which it stands who are not openly and formally joined in its membership.

The inventory of the motor truck resources of the country shows that the army has available in service now approximately 20,000 trucks. It is estimated that there are in addition 300,000 privately owned motor trucks which can be commandeered under the National Defense Act in the event of an emergency. This action will be taken, it is predicted, should there be a general railroad tieup, in order to move food and other essentials to the larger cities.

JUVENILE ACT IS ENJOYABLE

Popular With Majestic Audiences

Miss Marian M. Merchant, well-known organist of this city, has resumed her work, having fully recovered from her recent nervous breakdown. Miss Merchant is playing the accompaniments for "The Miracle Man," the celebrated photoplay which opened a week's engagement at the Regent Theater yesterday. Theatergoers welcome Miss Merchant's return here. Her work has long since been recognized as of unusual merit, and her performance at the Regent Theater yesterday justified the interest manifested in the remarkable program she rendered. The musical accompaniment to "The Miracle Man" is no small feature in adding to the wonderful popularity of this excellent photoplay. As rendered by Miss Merchant, it constructs a beautiful setting for an amazing screen picture. The name and fame of "The Miracle Man" had spread to Harrisburg before the initial showing of the film here. That was evidenced by the great crowds which sought entrance to the Regent Theater yesterday. The word was fast to come from Philadelphia and New York that this new Paramount-Artcraft production was "the greatest ever screened."

MEMORY

You remember the time, not so long ago, when north of State street everything was a wilderness. Ask your father he knows. Ask him what ground was selling for 30 years ago in that section. Ask your banker how fast ground values has increased. The whole section between State and Herr streets is built up with homes and residences now equal to the Dream of Independence. Are you still Dreaming About it? If so, wake up.

The man who dreamt about his home, a home of his own, the home of his olden days, the resting place after the battle of existence has been won, will never succeed, he will keep on dreaming. The man who acts is the man who succeeds. Join him. You'll never be sorry.
