Pokes Into Hole With Stick and Wildcat Strikes

Lewistown, Pa., Nov. 6.—While Harvey Varner was crossing the mountain at Blacklog he saw an animal that resembled a fox go into a hole among some rocks. Getting a stick he poked into the hole and a wildcat came out with a blood-curdling yell and struck at his face. Varner thought his time had come. Fortunately the animal missed him and went down the mountain side at a mile-a-ninute gait. Varner says he is done hunting wild animals with sonly a stick as a weapon.
