Franklin County Parent Seeks $10,000 For Daughter's Betrayal by Doctor

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 12. John Kriner is suing William Heckman here for $10,000 damages, fol-lowing the betrayal of his daughter, by John Keckler, a Waynes-"hex" doctor, who was convicted of criminal misbehavior and sent to the Eastern Penitentiary.
The case is on trial here before The case is on trial here before Judge Gillan. Witchcraft, superstition and the final revelations of the duplicity of the hex doctor featured the opening testimony in the case.

Strange things were happening in Peters township in the vicinity of the Heckman farms in 1915, the testimony disclosed. Animals were dying, and those just born were stunted in growth as a result of a blighting influence on the Heckman farm. At the time there lived in Waynesboro a man, John Keckler. His services were sought and he appeared at the Heckman home, at the increase of the moon to work his charm for good and save the country folk from further loss of property.

Kriner, a neighbor of the Heck-charm for good and save the country folk from further loss of property.

Kriner, a neighbor of the Heckmans, was included in the scheme to rid the countryside of witches and Keckler went at once to the Kriner, neighbors of the Heckmans, were selected as the assistants. In order that the doctor might work most effectively it was necessary that the girls touch the "hem of his garment" and according to the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Kriner, the girls were summoned periodically to perform their part in ridding the neighborhood of the influences of evil. They were taken to the Heckman home and when the parents retired for the night they left their daughters in Keckler's care, who asserted the girls would be as "well cared for as in the hands of their God," the testimony showed.

Keckler, who is serving a term in the Eastern Penitentiary, is 60 years of age. The case probably will end this evening.

School May Lose Its

Camp Hill, Pa., Nov. 12.—Unless the local school board pays a defict on the moving picture machine purchased by the High School Athletic Association the machine will be lost, students of the school said to-day. It was purchased several years ago by the athletic association for the use of the entire school, and cost over $300. Of this amount more than $100 has been paid. Further payments are out of the question, students say, because the money is not available and the association is compelled to use its funds for athletics. Recently the pupils voted to turn the machine over to the school. Student are hoping school board members will make provision to pay the balance.
