THURSDAY EVENING.

"The Merry Milk Maids" an oper votes, one by the sophomore etta under the direction of Miss class and the other by the entire Mary Stewart Blair will be given student body of Franklin and next Monday evening in the Boyd Marshall College as the result of the Marshall College as the result of the suspension of fifteen students pharged with hazing a freshman several days ago was finally overruled by the junior and senior classes of the school late yesterday afternoon.

The students who favored overruling the strike had a bare lead of eight votes. As the result of the vote an air of uncertainty over future action surrounds the school.

On Tuesday afternoon the sophomore class voted unanimously to strike. Sometime later a meeting of the student body was called and a strike vote taken. This resulted in the entire body voting to strike. The sophomores and freshmen left the hall to celebrate the victory and a member of the senior class took charge of the meeting. The new chairman overruled the strike vote, barred the lower classmen from casting ballots and called for another vote. It was this final vote that finally resulted in overruling the general strike order.

Twenty students under arrest for the hazing are to be given a hearing to-day.

Charles P. Steinmetz, the widely known electrical engineer.

The most revolutionary feature of Mr. Dey's car is the motor, in which both armature and field magnet are rotatable one element being connected to one driving wheel by way of a pair of reduction gears, while the other element connects with the other wheel in similar manner. It is in this way that the designer dispenses with different gears; the motor with its independent rotation of parts makes a perfect substitute. In the latest design the operation of the control is similar to that met on a gas car. For speed variation a foot lever acts in the same way as a clutch, with the added feature that pressure beyond that to cut the current off impels the motor to act as a brake, while extreme use of the foot power applies the mechanical brake to the driving wheels. In addition there is an emergency brake.

foot power applies the mecanical brake to the driving wheels. In addition there is an emergency brake. An accelerator pedal raises the speed to thirty miles by weakening the field. A third pedal gives forward, reverse and neutral. This is so interlocked with the speed pedal that it can be moved only when the latter stands in a high resistance or the off position.

The steering wheel is hinged to permit of tilting when entering the car. The post is inclined to an angle of 36 degrees from the horizontal, giving the car a racy appearance. All this is mentioned here to convey some impression of the lines of this car, differing so materially from the bulky effect of most electrics.

The battery is carried underneath the floor and attached to the truss rod posts. This leaves the body entirely free of incumbrances and permits it to be utilized entirely for passengers and luggage. A radical departure has been made in the tirely free of incuming the passengers and luggage. A radical departure has been made in the spring suspension, as air springs have been substituted for the ellipti-spring suspension, as air springs have been substituted for the elliptical type.

Mr. Dey has largely increased the scope of his car by designing a portable charging plant, weighing approximately 100 pounds, to be carried under the bonnet of the car. It consists of a light three-horsepower air-cooled, gasoline engine, connected to a special dynamo. It will charge the battery at any time, whether the car be running or standing, at a rate equal to the normal consumption of the driving motor, which experience has shown to be two-horse power. This plant causes a net saving in weight of the car of more than 100 pounds, due to the fact that one-half the battery can be dispensed with, a fifty-mile plantary radius then being sufficient. If desired, the plant may be removed from the car, to be used as a stationary unit for recharging, as well as for charging, a separate battery for house lighting, etc. It is a simple matter to place the power plant in the car against a long trip. The smaller battery required will largely cancel the additional cost of the charging plant.—Scientific American.

Buckwheat Coal $6.90

Much the Cheapest Fuel

D UCKWHEAT coal was once thought unavailable for domestic fuel, but popular demand has brought about its use for many purposes. Most apartment houses and other big buildings that formerly used larger sizes have changed their equipment so as to burn buckwheat. The anthracite industry is using Buckwheat coal in and about the mines with good results. It is suggested that the best results are obtained by keeping this coal separated from other coal in a special bin. During the day fire one shovelful to one, two or more of larger sizes, according to the weather. In mild weather use a larger proportion of the Buckwheat coal.

The night mixture in banking fire should take more Buckwheat. It keeps well. When the drafts are put on next morning the small coal responds quickly.

> Try a sample ton at $6.90. If you have no separate bin, put it on top of the larger coal. Use it when fire gets low. See how quickly radiators get warm.
