New York, Nov. 21.—Farming conditions in West Borneo are graphically described by Dr. J. W. Hoover, of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, in a letter received by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Hoover has charge of the mission and Centenary community center at Sibn, Sarawak, West Borneo, and is teaching native Dyaks, Chinese and Malays scientific farming. The mission is a modern community center, and owns 250 acres of jungle land which is scientifically farmed. The mission also owns two rice mills, an ice plant and a rubber garden. The pupils of the high and public schools are taught modern ways of farming and work in the garden and on the farm.

The native Dyaks who are jungle men are being taught the most modern ways of agriculture and are becoming interested. Dr. Hoover says the native Dyaks hate any kind of work, especially farming. They make no gardens and raise no vegetables except gourds. These are made into vessels for carrying water. Rather than do agricultural work, the Dyaks prefer to gather roots and leaves from the jungle and eat them. "At the sight of the hoe," Dr. Hoover says, "the Dyaks would drop dead."

Premier of Canada to Accompany Prince of Wales to Halifax

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 21.—Sir Robert Borden, premier of Canada, who has been here for several days will leave on Saturday for New York and will accompany the Prince of Wales on the cruiser Renown to Halifax, where a farewell dinner will be tendered the Prince. This will be the Prince's last social function prior to his departure for England. Sir Robert will return to Ottawa early next week.

Imperator to Be Returned to Britain

Washington, Nov. 21.—Settlement of the controversy over disposition of the German liner Imperator is indicated, will be rendered immediately to Great Britain. Action with regard to the seven other German steamers in the same status had not been determined, it was said. It will depend, it was indicated, on final disposition of the tankers under the German flag, but American-owned now held in the Fifth of Forth by direction of the Supreme Council.

The Imperator was one of a number of former German liners taken from German ports after the armistice was signed, and allotted to the United States to return troops. After completing her last trip as a transport, she was to have been delivered on September 27 to the Cunard line, and was advertised to sail as a passenger ship October 11. On the day set for delivery, however, army officers of the port of embarkation received instructions from Washington to maintain possession. Afterwards custody of the ship was transferred to the Shipping Board.

Hamlin Refuses Treasury Post

Washington, Nov. 21.—Charles S. Hamlin has refused to accept appointment as Secretary of the Treasury to succeed Secretary Glass, who resigned to accept appointment to the United States Senate in place of Cornell Leffingwell, who has been re-elected to the Treasury. Mr. Hamlin was the first Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. He is now a member of that board. In this position where he is devoted to and pleased with his work, Mr. Hamlin receives a salary of 12,000 a year and his term of office has seven years to run. As Secretary of the Treasury he would receive the same salary and if he had accepted he would have been stepping into the position at the tag end of an administration.

It was intimated in an unusually reliable quarter late yesterday afternoon that the name of Russell Cornell Leffingwell, who has been Assistant Secretary of the Treasury since October 30, 1917, has now come very much to the front among the names of those under consideration for the Treasury Secretaryship. In the event of Mr. Leffingwell's appointment, the friends of John Mahan, of Philadelphia, will urge his selection as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to succeed Mr. Leffingwell.

SEES DECREASE IN EXPORT LINE

Prof. Willis Points to Warnings on Credits; Expects Trade Shift

The immediate prospects of our trade are largely dependent upon the extent to which we are willing to finance it and that a very large volume of our foreign trade must apparently be done upon credit. It is indicated that we must submit as an alternative to a great reduction in the actual volume of trade, asserts Henry Parker Willis, professor of banking at Columbia University and director of analysis and research of the Federal Reserve Board. "Since the suspension of free movement of gold and the great changes that have come about in the control of exported commodities," says Professor Willis, "the usual influence which tends to prevent a withdrawal of exports from going too far have been absent. Accordingly, foreign countries import freely, while the United States has gone on extending credit to them and exporting in the belief that by so doing it was helping the foreigner and at the same time making a large profit. "The fact that the United States and other countries have paid us no interest on our investment and are not likely to do so in the near future throws a bright light upon the non-profitableness of the trade and makes it worth while to wonder whether from the strict business standpoint we should not paid too much for the whistles in the form of very high domestic prices and costs of living. This is a situation in which the interest of specialized export industries is placed ahead of that of the rank and file of consumers and in which exporters may find it advantageous to participate in a movement which will be analyzed in the interests of the public at large. It is a situation which tends to correct itself, as already seen, by virtue of the fact that the public at large has appealed to the means with which to finance the further shipment of the goods, but a large section of the public finds its investment paying better than the interest of the vast increases in living cost. "New Course of Action "It may fairly be said that a definite foreign trade policy has been lacking except as a common course of action among bankers and financiers has been emphatically worked out. That course of action, so far as can be gathered from a survey of the facts, may be considered to include the following points: "(1) Suspension of Government financing of the export trade. This is the least of the measures to be taken for the future, as indicated by authoritative announcement of executive officers. "(2) Suspension or abandoning of the idea of financing export trade by commercial banking credits, subject to renewal. "(3) Disinclination on the part of the general public to provide the means for the continued expansion of exports through the steady absorption of foreign obligations of all kinds. "(4) Recognition of the probable necessity of placing our foreign trade credit application upon this new course, studying it carefully from the point of view of its merits as an individual action of those who are most directly concerned in securing its success. "(5) Abandonment of the idea of creating an artificial exchange relationship between different countries and consequently development of an adverse relation to possible currencies which in itself tends to correct the export situation by discouraging buying in the United States. "(6) In consequence of these different trends or tendencies, a reduction in the movement of our goods abroad. "Speculating Not Saving "Unquestionable it certainly is that much of our current earnings is not going to saving but is being diverted to speculation or waste. One reason for the unfavorable reception of various foreign offerings of securities is the fact that funds are so largely employed in all kinds of transactions in real estate, commodities and loans. In the nature of the case the foreigner cannot offer a very large rate of interest as contrasted with the possible earnings of funds in speculative employment. "Our attitude toward foreign securities must therefore depend very largely upon the extent to which we value our trade development. If we are willing to allow temporary speculative profits to outweigh our interest in steady foreign trade development on which to build future business the prospect of financing our foreign trade is not very good and we may expect an early decline in it. On the other hand, if we are willing to be content with a modern rate of interest and prefer this, coupled with the prospect of developing a strong foreign trade, to the quick and easy profits already referred to the chance of floating foreign trade securities is very much improved. "Just at present, for reasons already stated, the pendulum appears to have swung against foreign trade financing, with the result since the beginning of November new low records in exchange quotations have been made while the prospects appear to indicate a decline in goods shipments to sundry foreign countries. That such a decline will continue to manifest itself because of the inability of this country to absorb any such quantity of securities as would be necessary to continue the financing on its present scale, and because of the apparent disinclination of American investors to pay much attention to long-range trade problems, is the opinion of not a few, and in the absence of countervailing considerations seems to be entirely likely.

AT THE COLONIAL

The Colonial management is offering Harrisburg motion picture patrons some unusual attractions this week. Charles Ray, Louise Glaum and Dorothy Dalton are co-starring in a photoplay now playing there entitled "The Weaker Sex." This picture will be shown to-day and to-morrow for the last time. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week Mary Miles Minter, hailed as one of the prettiest women in motion pictures, will be shown in a Reelart production, "Anne of the Green Gables." Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Norma Talmadge will be offered in her latest success, "Isle of Conquest." She will be supported in this picture by her youngest sister, Nattie, who has also joined the ranks of motion picture stars.

AT THE VICTORIA

Mary Pickford won so much favor in the hearts of Harrisburgers several weeks ago in her presentation of "Daddy Long Legs," that the Victoria Theater management has re-booked this picture to be shown to-day and to-morrow for the last time. This picture of people who failed to see the production when it was here, owing to the crowded condition of the way of explanation, it may be said it is really one of the greatest pictures ever shown in Harrisburg. It is the story of an orphan, who was mothered by an ash can, shirred from a telephone directory, who prunes three times a day until she won favor in the eyes of one of the orphan school directors, who sent her to college. Then and only then does she learn who "Daddy Long Legs" really is.

REGENT

All this week—D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms," featuring the beautiful and talented child actor, "His Last False Step." Tuesday and Wednesday—Elsie Ferguson in "The Witness for the Defense." Friday and Saturday of this week—Marguerite Clark in "Widow by Proxy."

"SOMEBODY'S SWEETHEART"

"Somebody's Sweetheart," which will play at the Orpheum Theater to-day and to-morrow, matinee to-morrow, comes with the distinction of being one of the most successful musical comedies bearing the Arthur Hammerstein stamp this season. The company, under the management of Broadway last season. The company consists of "Tumble Inn" and "Some Time." The nine months engagement in New York at the Victoria Theater of "Somebody's Sweetheart." The elements of the theatergoers that seek diversion in that routinized entertainment, it is in that routinized entertainment, it is "jazz" would do well to check their appreciation of his last for here is a show that commends itself chiefly. It is said, for its attractive, never in a Spanish villa, there is opportunity for both principals and chorus to express themselves humorously and tunefully without resorting to the banal or the overdone. "Somebody's Sweetheart" is unique in American-Spanish entertainments. The book and lyrics were written by Charles H. Taylor, who has rewarded not only by royalties, but with the hand of his own daughter, who will be Mr. Price's son-in-law. Antonio Bafunno wrote the music, which includes the tune who have been whistling for weeks, "It Gets Them All."

THE GUARDED PALMAMAS

The exquisite, satin pajamas worn by the beautiful Miss Sargent in the second act of "Up in Mabel's Room," the famous New York farce which is now being produced at the Orpheum Theater soon, have created a great deal of interest. It is something of a mystery why they were first seen in the arms of Miss Sargent, and their appearance in the play throughout the course of the act. Miss Sargent, in her pajamas, but this, of course, is not possible, and the fact that they are produced as the dialogue itself, and while it is not possible to see them, it is said that they are carefully guarded, and are seen only for the briefest moment before the actress of her boundless slippers and jumps into bed.

AT THE MAJESTIC

Very heavily at the first showing it played in Harrisburg yesterday. This musical comedy was the wilder on the legitimate stage for several seasons. It has now been reproduced in a new and more elaborate company is playing the engagement at the Majestic. Two other Keith acts, "The Great Gambler" and "The Great Gambler," complete the Majestic offering for the last half of this week. The Great Gambler has received many compliments from the business men of Harrisburg who have a chance of winning some money in the contest which starts at 10 o'clock on Monday. Watch the daily papers for the announcement.

Helen Ware Co-starring with Lou Tellegen in "The Lust of Gold"

The coming of Lou Tellegen is always an event of moment for Harrisburg theatergoers. In all probability there is no actor before the public to-day who occupies the unique position that Tellegen holds. An artist of rare attainment he has given us the very best that the spoken drama affords. Being now under his own management, it is safe to say that his production of a new play written by himself in collaboration with Andor Garay, will be quite above anything he has yet given, and it is gratifying to know that he has shown his rare good judgment in the selection of Helen Ware as a co-star. The combination should prove a remarkable one. Miss Ware occupies an enviable position among the best known women on the American stage. Her starting tours under the management of the late Henry E. Harris, and her remarkable performances in "The Third Degree" and "Within the Law" are fresh in the minds of playgoers. The supporting cast includes a strong array of well known players including Hedwig Reicher, Charles Hampden, Arthur Fitzgerald and others.

PLAY TONIGHT

Jan Sikesz, the celebrated Dutch pianist, whose recital at Fahnstock Hall this evening is looked forward to with great interest by music lovers of this section of the country, is one of a great many artists whose rise to fame was held in abeyance by the way the night that the fatal shot which murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand was fired. Sikesz was playing to a crowded house in Paris. The following morning he was in a flat near Paris, never-to-be-forgotten delights. Yet in a few short weeks the name of Sikesz and of all other artists of his kind who had not already established themselves in the hearts and minds of men were filled with the long roll of men who were dying in arms. Sikesz, however, had reached this country and in the autumn of the year the great war started he was invited to play at the opening concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra, which invitation he gratefully accepted. His playing on this occasion was acclaimed with delight by New York critics and he was invited to give a tour of a few of the leading musical cities of America, having made the customary bow in Italian Hall. He is again in this country this winter and he has been invited to play here. He has been planned for him later in the season, he accepted the invitation of a few people who were invited to see who had heard him play abroad, and his promised appearance at Fahnstock Hall on Friday evening is the result. This varied program has been selected for this occasion comprising numbers by Beethoven, Chopin, Cyril Scott,

The Story of the Orphan Who Made Good

Sleep Like a Top
You can, just as soon as you get rid of that stomach and liver trouble and not before. Sleeplessness is frequently due to disorder in the organs of digestion, and consequently, to avoid it you must put these organs right. The use of narcotics is not only dangerous but leaves the cause of the trouble untouched and should therefore be avoided. The surest means of finding relief in the circumstances referred to is undoubtedly Beecham's Pills.
After Taking
a few doses of this famous medicine the digestive functions will resume their energy, the sluggish liver become active, the bowels healthily regulated.
