LANCASTER WILL HEAR DR. FREUND

Music Festival Is Planned For Three Days For the First Week in December

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 28.—Lancaster is to have a great music festival on Dec. 3, 4 and 5. Dr. John C. Freund, editor of "Musical America," will give a free lecture on "The Democratizing of Music in the Boy's High School Auditorium, Thursday evening, December 4, at 8.15 o'clock.

Community singing will begin promptly at 8 o'clock with W. H. Troost, who has so successfully led the community singing at West End and Buchanan Parks this summer, as leader. A public school chorus composed of about 500 school children, is being trained by Miss Humphreys, and a few other choruses will be of great help in the festival. Dr. Freund's address will not be academic. Its purpose is to arouse the people to the value of music by means of great composers, what music has done for us in industry, by means of introducing it in working hours, and lays particular stress on the community helping and standing by its own musicians, teachers and newspapers.

Dr. Paul S. Feinbach, editor of the Reformed Church Messenger, will also give a brief talk on music, as well as Prof. Paul E. Beck, State Supervisor of Music.

STATE'S MARKETS NOW NUMBER 131

Most of Them Are in Smaller Towns of Pennsylvania Nowadays

Twenty-three of the sixty-one municipalities in Pennsylvania which have public markets are places with less than 10,000 population, according to a survey of the markets of the State made by the State Bureau of Markets. The bureau has heard of 131 markets. The sixty-one places reporting them are in thirty-eight counties. In all officials of 486 cities and boroughs were asked about market facilities and the results indicate that many officers favor establishment of markets either on a municipal or corporate basis, while others asked for State assistance in getting the necessary supply to their people in some other way than farmers selling by outcry through the streets or delivering only to commission merchants in the town. Several of the reports were to the effect that efforts were under way to get farmers assured that there would be a regular demand for their produce.

The market survey developed 58 curb markets, practically all used by farmers and 73 enclosed markets in which city merchants also had stalls, but in which farmers predominated. Another fact was that in twelve cities markets were abandoned, some of them after having been conducted for a long period of years. The bureau has agreed to give such assistance as is possible in establishing market and to get farmers into touch with the people of the towns and also to demonstrate ways by which towns can attract farmers, by publishing what is needed.

The bureau plans another survey which will go into more details about the markets.

DEER HUNTERS ARE HEADING TO CAMPS

Advance Guard Starts to South Mountain For Opening of Season on Monday; Living in Tents During Outing Is Thing of Past in Southern Pennsylvania

Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—To-day the advance guard of the deer hunters began moving to the camps in the mountains, with the main body following to-morrow and Sunday. About thirty camps have places in the old South Mountain in the western end of Adams county. For two weeks this section of the county will be one of great activity.

These Adams county mountains are perhaps the most popular deer hunting grounds in the southern part of the State and approximately 3,000 men will travel over their slopes for the next fifteen days. While most of them are from Adams and Franklin counties many come from different parts of the State. The advance guard which moved to-day are the men who will get the various camps in readiness for the arrival of the main body. In some of the camps, however, the work of preparing has been going on for some time as the time has been drawing near, and it is only the few details that must be arranged.

For a number of years the camps in the mountains one of pleasure. By Sunday night all the hunters will be in their respective camps ready for the start of the drive on Monday morning.
